Affordable • Sustainable • Innovative

lingshot Residential was founded on the ideals of affordability, Sustainability and innovation. They are committed to developing housing solutions that contribute to the process of revitalization. As residents of North Central, they bring an insider's perspective to resolving the challenges.

PROJECTS

The primary goal of 'Foundational Change' project is to create an affordable, durable and sustainable house model that combines the Multipoint Foundation with a strategy to revitalize inner-city neighbourhoods.

Tipping the balance in North Central from rental to home ownership is part of this strategy. The 'Foundational Change' house model ensures that the cycle of housing degradation link to concrete basements is broken, that the houses maintain their value families are given safe and affordable places to build their lives and pride of ownership is nurtured. Our vision is a thriving, family-centered Community in North Central Regina.

MARKET

Slingshot Residential seeks to provide affordable housing to first-time home owners who fall into one of two categories:

- Families who are currently living in North Central who are interested in further investing in the community through home ownership
- Families who are willing to relocate to North Central by purchasing a home and becoming a part of the community with the goal of contributing to revitalization of the community

PARTNERSHIPS

- Sask Housing has provided funding through the Summit Action Fund toward the Foundational Change project. The project involved creating a house model using a Multipoint Foundation (MPF); proven technology with a 30-year track record of eliminating building damage due to differential soil movement. The project seeks to demonstrate the benefits of MPF technology in Saskatchewan by building three homes in North Central Regina and monitoring the foundations.
- Slingshot Residential has partnered with Esperanza Development Corporation (www.esperanzask. ca) a non-profit organization focused on inner-city Regina. Esparanza is providing volunteer labour with the goal of creating an affordable home on the 900-block Retallack for the owner, a single mother with three children and a lifelong resident of North Central.
- The City of Regina has provided two discounted North Central lots through the 2011 City of Regina Lot Draw on the condition that the homes be sold for 10% less than market value.

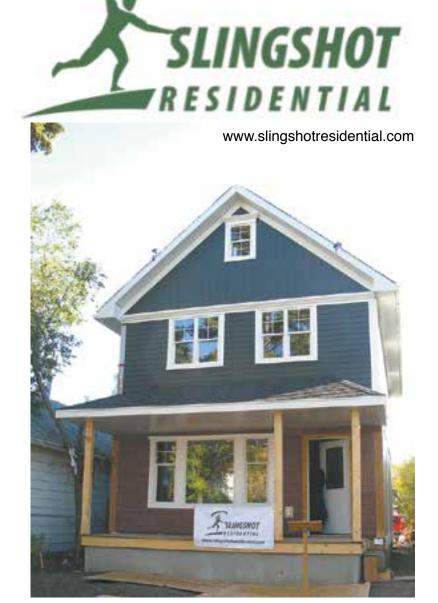

The Multipoint Foundation (MPF) is a space frame system that was developed by Triodetic Canada at the request of the Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation to prevent foundation damage (called racking or differential movement of the foundation)

The technology has been installed at 800 locations in Canada, the United States, and Russia during the last 35 years.

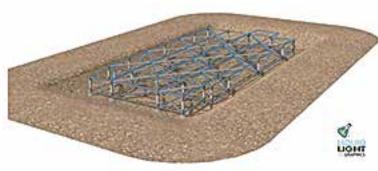

Slingshot Residential was incorporated in 2011.

Ken Watson (Construction Manager) has lived in the heart of North Central Regina since 1995. He approaches community revitalization from a unique perspective. He combines a passion about healing the hearts and minds of the residents of North Central with a passion to create dignified homes for those hearts and minds to dwell in.

Rob Sentis (Project Manager) is an experienced project manager in the commercial sustainable building industry. Rob's passion is to see Regina fully realize the environmental, economic and social benefits of sustainable housing and development.

Peekishkwewin (language, talk)

Tanshi! Hello! It's an exciting time to be at Wascana Community School. My name is Mandi Elles and I am teaching Wascana's Indigenous Studies and Language program.

Our children are exploring, sharing and discovering the history, contributions and languages of Indigenous people in Canada. Students are led in a traditional educational approach based on the "Three Ls": natohta: LISTEN, kanawapahta: LOOK and kishkayhta: LEARN! Students participate in inquiry projects, hands-on activities and basic language instruction.

The Plains Cree 'Y' dialect as well as Michif are used to teach the language component of our class. Michif is a unique Métis language that consists of a blend of Cree verbs and French nouns. Michif is also a language that is in danger of becoming extinct due to the decline of fluent speakers. In some regions of Canada and the United States, Michif also includes other Indigenous languages such as Saulteaux and Dakota. The mixture of these languages is a symbol of the significant history and diversity among Indigenous nations in our country.

I encourage and invite ALL speakers and knowledge keepers in our community to become involved in our program. The revitalization of our Indigenous languages is especially important for our youth, as language is a large part of identity.

Traditional teachings are also very special opportunities for our community to grow and learn together. Please contact the school office or come for a visit if you are interested in sharing your gift!

Wascana Pre-Ks and Kindergartens Celebrate

Eric Carle, pre-K teacher

On Thursday, October 24th, over 100 pre-Ks, Kindergarteners and their families participated in an Eric Carle Family Day.

Activities included a whole group reading of "Brown Bear, Brown Bear, What do you See?" and an animated version of "The Very Hungry Caterpillar" on the big screen, as well as various 'makeand-take' art activities based on these two books.

A big thank you to all our families who participated and to Ms. Shukin for providing a scrumptious snack for all to enjoy.

The Terry Fox Run

by MacKenzie grade 4/5

The whole school took part in the Terry Fox run. We did this to remember Terry Fox who had cancer and worked hard to raise money for cancer research.

Ms. Kimbley's class participated in the run at 3 o'clock. It was raining and was a bit cold but we didn't stop even through the rain and we were glad to have participated in remembering this Canadian hero.

n Friday, September 27th, the senior students and teachers (Alison Kimbley, Jason Howse, Natalie Agecoutay-Sweet, and Leatha Bird) from Wascana School went to the University of Regina to participate in the annual Glen Anaquod Tipi Raising Competition. There were many teams registered for the event, representing corporate groups, university students, faculty members, and high school students, but Wascana was the sole elementary school team in attendance.

Over the course of the afternoon, the Wascana team grew and grew to include many of our students, and it was exciting to watch as they began to take charge of the raising of the tipi while the teachers took a step back and let the problem-solving happen. Given the large scale changes at Wascana this year, this was a wonderful team-building exercise for both students and teachers alike. In the end, the Wascana team placed third in the High School category.

Dive for Dollars

In October 2013 two staff members from R.A.M.P. Inc. and a R.A.M.P. volunteer decided to skydive. This is something that Sheila Sinclair, Aaron Froh and Gwen Seed had always wanted to do. As the planning began they decided that this would be a great opportunity to raise awareness and funds for community youth programming. North Central Family Centre and North Central Kids Music were the two agencies chosen to receive any donations raised. It was decided that 100% of the proceeds would go directly towards youth activities. As a result of this endeavor R.A.M.P. was able to provide both agencies with donations to help enhance the services that they provide. We have included a brief on each organization:

Tips for the Holiday Season

The holidays are supposed to be a time of joy: family, friends, gifts, food, Christmas lights and music. However, for many it is a time of unwanted stress and struggle. The overwhelming financial and psychological burden of the holiday season can result in the "holiday blues". It's easy to forget about yourself and get lost in other's expectations of you, be that social commitments or financially. Take a minute to focus on what is important to you during the holiday season. Sticking to the basics, as you define them, may allow for the holidays to be a little less stressful. Below are a few tips that may help towards maintaining a positive mind set during the holiday season:

Prioritize your schedule. We are busy enough in our day-to-day lives, even more so during the holidays. It is okay to say "no" to social events.

Remember that it is okay to feel sad or angry during the holidays. Your emotions are valid no matter what time of year it may be; however, allow others to express their "holiday cheer" if they so desire. Maybe it will rub off on you, and maybe not. Whatever happens, it is okay.

Allow for change. Don't expect every holiday to be the same. People change, as do family situations, attempt to accept it to the best of your ability.

Although alcohol tends to be a part of many holiday celebrations, drink responsibly. Overuse can increase feelings of depression.

Attempt to create and maintain a reasonable budget. A great gift isn't measured in terms of the dollars spent: homemade gifts, baking and visits over coffee carry more value than money.

Allow for down time. Don't let yourself get so caught up in the "hustle and bustle" that you forget to allow yourself the much needed time to unwind and focus on yourself and your family.

Don't be afraid to ask for help. We all need support, especially during the holidays. Don't be afraid to reach out to family, friends, or community support groups whether you are suffering through the loss of a loved one, depression or a broken relationship.

Lastly, try to keep it as positive as you can. Focus on the good and maintain hope!

Holidays are over in the blink of an eye, so slow down and enjoy it! Find your own unique traditions. Take time to enjoy the small things: the smiles, the chill in the air, the Christmas lights. Moreover, remember that the not so fun stuff will pass: the extra spending, the mass amount of social commitments, the grief and the overplayed Christmas music (this is my own personal opinion, I know some people adore it; however, I am ready for it to end once December is over!). Stick to the basics and try to enjoy it!

Renew in Review

ome of the highlights of this year's Renew project were engaging residents who had given up

During these blitzes youth graffiti offenders (who we will call J and E) came through the John Howard Society of Saskatchewan (JHSS). They had each worked 10 hours with the Renew Project doing alley clean ups. When they had another set of hours to complete they specifically requested working with the Renew Project. The JHSS coor-dinator expressed gratitude and appreciation for the Renew Project staff for the impact it had on these youth. In one blitz, E and the coordinator were driving down an alley and he pointed out his tag which was quite old. The coordinator had E knock on the homeowner's door to introduce himself as the offender who vandalized her property. The lady was elderly and told him she had just painted over a tag when his appeared. Due to ill health and limited funds, she was unable to cover it again, so the tag sat there for over a year. E apologized and offered to cover it up immediately. He did, and the homeowner expressed a sincere appreciation for it.

The YOUNG OFFENDERS These young expressed both complete shock and humility to have SO MANY different people THANK THEM.

showed a strong remorse and had a clearer understanding of the impact of their crimes. The biggest level of awareness came during the moments of being in the alleys, painting. All types of people approached us, questioning what we were doing, thanking us for our efforts, and sometimes congratulating the youth on completing their hours by working hard. Some of these visitors also enquired if there were available jobs doing what we were doing. The young offenders expressed both complete shock and humility to have so many different people thank them. It was a matter of not being judged as well as breaking stereotypes. It helped the youth see that even downand-out people do not want their neighbourhood vandalized or abused. Conversations with these youth reflected their sense of awareness of the impact of their crimes on the victims as well as the neighbourhood.

In addition to the work bee and the blitzes, Renew staff have been monitoring re-tags. We have had approximately 20 retags all summer out of the entire area of the 600-1400 blocks from Elphinstone to Albert Street. Most of the re-tags were done by the same individual(s). We would paint over the re-tags and as of today, only 9 re-tags remain. There were approximately 30 graffiti tags on non-white surfaces that we did not cover as we only had the use of white paint.

How to make new friends and RENEW a neighbourhood:

The process began with delivering an introductory flyer to residents of targetted blocks notifying them when Renew Project staff would return to conduct a survey and solicit volunteers for the work bee.

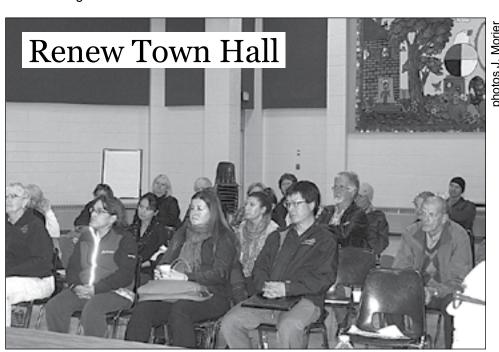

Renew Project staff conducted the survey and informed residents how to report graffiti as well as educated them on other NCCA programs.

This was followed by holding the work bee with our neighbours. With all tools provided by Renew we picked garbage, covered graffiti and tackled minor yard work together.

After the work bee, staff hosted a BBQ to encourage community engagement and communication as well as to enjoy our accomplishments!

The Renew project would like to thank the following people for their donations and support:

City of Regina, Rainbow Youth Centre, John Howard Society of Saskatchewan, RAMP, B&B Small Engine Sales & Service Company, Wendy Dumalski, General Paint, Colorburst Paint, James Morberg and Wendy Grant, Regina Police Service, Aids Programs South Saskatchewan, Go Green, Student Summer Works Program, McDonalds, 5th Avenue Convenience Store, and Roberta Pelletier (for the AMAZING BANNOCK). Most importantly, The Renew Project would like to thank all of the volunteers and especially the North Central Residents who came out and led by example in working towards a safer, cleaner community. It is the volunteers who made the difference, and we are forever thankful for the time given!

A Day of Healing and Discussion

Murders...Missing...Violence. Change is needed in Regina. There's an urgent need for collective healing, peer support, community support, a family healing centre. Dealing with the trauma and grief through ceremony and traditional ways.

excerpt from Regina Police Service website: www.reginapolice.ca/2013/11/day-of-healing-and-discussion-gathering-place/n November 6, 2013, Regina Treaty Status Indian Services hosted a unique event in response to community concern over violence, crime and victimization. The Day of Healing and Discussion, held at the Gathering Place at 4001-3rd Avenue North in Regina brought together community members, frontline workers and other concerned citizens with mental health professionals, Elders, police and other resources. The day began with a Pipe Ceremony and objectives for the event included: recognition of the importance of ceremony and First Nations culture in creating strong individuals and community; acknowledgement of the impact of traumatic events on individuals, families and community; skills to help people make change in their lives; and strategies to help people live in safety.

"Right now our First Nations communities are hurting and we do need to sit down together and discuss how we can make changes", said Vice Chief Kimberly Jonathan, of the Federation of Saskatchewan Indian Nations.

"We want this gathering to create community mobilization and to provide less chances of victimization for themselves and their loved ones" said Erica Beaudin, Urban Services Manager, Regina Treaty Status Indian Services Inc.

"We felt very strongly that we needed to be part of this day to answer the questions we can and to urge people to examine their own personal safety plans", said Chief Troy Hagen of the Regina Police Service."

Attendance for the Day of Healing and Discussion was higher than expected and organizers plan to continue to explore opportunities for community discussion, education and information sharing.

REDress Project

In November red dresses on hangers waved in the breezes at the University of Regina. The motion caught your eye, and when you realized what the many dresses represented, the emotion caught your heart.

Each of the 300 red dresses represented a murdered or missing aboriginal woman in Canada. Some were donated by the family members of the murderded or missing.

Installation artist Jaime Black says the exhibit has been shown in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Kamloops, Toronto and London, England. In 2014, the exhibit will be shown at the Canadian Museum for Human Rights in Winnipeg for one year.

Walking With Our Sisters

This element of ceremony and respecting local Indigenous protocol ensures that the honouring of missing and murdered Indigenous women is the focus and also represents a reclamation of justice and healing for our communities.

WWOS has been guided by Métis Elder, Maria Campbell since the beginning and she will continue to guide ceremony as needed. The project is also travelling with medicines (plants held in high regard by various Indigenous nations) and two eagle staffs.

Engagement and the meaningful involvement and leadership of families of missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls is a critical component to what we want to help build through the work of Walking With Our Sisters. We encourage families to participate in local community exhibits, programming and the leadership of the project as it travels.

The project is a commemorative art installation to honour the lives of missing and murdered Indigenous Women of Canada and the United States.

The moccasin tops are also known as 'uppers' or 'vamps' and are the portion of the moccasin that is usually adorned with beaded images, on top of the foot.

Each pair of unfinished moccasins represents the unfinished life of a missing or murdered Indigenous woman or girl.

The project now involves hundreds of volunteers who are working to organize exhibits in various communities across Canada and the United States.

Walking with our Sisters exhibit features more than 1,700 moccasin vamps. It is at the First Nations University of Canada making it the 2nd stop on a six-year tour.

On exhibit at the FNUniv Art Gallery until December 13

ave you ever wondered what life on earth would be like without carbon? Well neither did the students in the FADS (Freedom of Art, Direction of Science) Project. After learning about nutrient cycles in science, they were posed with the question "what if there was a carbon shortage?" They soon realized that without carbon, there would be no life on earth, but with a little imagination and some science fiction, students came up with an idea for a movie. The carbonless movie is currently in production and will be screened at Project Scott on January 15th. Ted Urness played for the Saskatchewan Roughriders as a centre offensive lineman from 1961-1970 He was named All Star six years in a row, and played in three Grey Cup games, winning the 1966 Grey Cup. Although he wasn't the best rugby prospect on his high school team, his departure from the Riders in 1970 was seen as the loss of the "greatest centre who would ever play for them". Urness was inducted into Roughrider Plaza of Honour in 1989

Log House Thrift Store

2741 Dewdney Avenue ph: 791-0255 Serving the community Monday to Saturday 10 am to 5 pm

You might remember the log cabin on Dewdney Avenue and Rae Street as the MCC Thrift Shop or in its earlier incarnation Painted Buffalo Trading Post. The building is now home to the Log House Thrift Store and it's chock full of quality used items. They've been operating for one year.

anager Penny says "Business has been great. More and more people are learning about the store, it was a well-kept secret for a long time, people didn't know where we were."

Wagner assures "We don't put anything out that isn't quality."

At this time baby boomers are downsizing or in transition, there are estate sales, many occasions where people need to cull their possessions. "Most sales items are donated by individuals, but some items of clothing come from women's high end used clothing shops. There are the odd items that get thrown away during sorting, as staff won't put out goods that are chipped, stained, or ripped, unless it's very very old. "We have a gentleman who looks at the jewelry or dishes that have value. If it's quality he prices it accordingly."

Penny adds "We really love being in this area. People from all walks of life sometimes need help. Help might mean being able to buy a really nice blouse—some of them still with brand new tags—for $3. We have a high end rack, which doesn't go very high end in price. We have Toonie Tuesdays -clothes, with the exception of coats—are $2. shoes are $3 unless they are really high end then they are $6 or $8. Our prices are very affordable across the

The Log House Thrift Shop is not affiliated with any group. Penny explains "We are our own entity, we're incorporated and run by a Board of Directors. We're building our funds to be able to give back—locally, provincially, nationally and globally." They recently donated to Mennonite Disaster Services destined for troubled areas. They've recently sent clothes to the Philippines, to churches in Moose Jaw, Salvation Army, and books to the hospital.

Barb works at the Log House part time. "I came in to work off a fine (fine options). Then I volunteered > because I enjoyed the job so much. I really like meeting different people, many who come into the store I do know already. I find it very fun working here and no two days are the same, you never know what you're going to be doing. I'm thankful that the board gave me the opportunity to come in as an employee. There are a lot of benefits to working here."

Volunteer placements at the Log House are appreciated. It's suitable for agencies or students who do community service hours. Duties include sorting, stocking, pricing, displaying, and property maintenance.

There's a downside to the business. "People who don't let us know they have dropped off items, most of which is garbage, that they can't be bothered to take to the dump themselves. If you donate anonymously we would really to empty these bins. We could use that money toward helping other people." It's a perpetual problem in many thrift shops. People don't take responsibility for their own junk. Despite a sign requesting: "Please do not leave your donations after 5:00" the bags get left, the contents get scattered, staff have to spend a

- 32+ Loraas Bins filled
- · 100+ volunteers

FUN FACTS:

BDF notified us that many of their crew were helped in the alleys by residents coming out to haul the stuff either from their yards or from their alley in general.

Oct. 21, the City of Regina dispatched Loraas to pick up in 2 more alleys that had been missed and they picked up the tab. That was another 1.52 tonnes (included in the overall total).

Bennett Dunlop Ford has said it is their goal to increase their volunteers every year and so far they have!

We thank all good neighbours who showed up and showed they care.
