Executive Summary

This report is a summary of research undertaken for the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region and Saskatchewan in Motion. The purpose of the research was to describe, in quantitative terms, the kinds of access that Regina residents have to restaurants and grocery stores, that is, what kinds of facilities are within walking distance of their homes. The research was conducted and this report was prepared by Doug Elliott, the principal of QED Information Systems Inc. and publisher of Sask Trends Monitor.

A list of all food service facilities in Regina was obtained from the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region and reduced to a total of 631 restaurants and food stores by removing duplicates, facilities with restricted access, or catering operations. Restaurants were classified into four subgroups and food stores into three subgroups as follows:

- 25 bars with food service;
- 188 full service restaurants;
- 42 limited service restaurants (including coffee shops);
- 180 quick service restaurants;
- 112 convenience stores;
- 59 specialty food stores; and
- 25 supermarkets.

Note that these food facilities do not limit a customer's choices, a priori, to either "good" or "bad" food but some offer a greater variety of food choices than others. A lot will depend on what the customer chooses to purchase. Nevertheless, healthy choices will be harder to find in some kinds of facilities than in other kinds.

The next stage in the analysis was to calculate the distance between the 333 neighbourhoods in Regina and each of the food facilities. A summary of the findings is presented below in point form.

- For 120 Regina neighbourhoods or 36% of the total, the nearest food facility of any kind is a full-service restaurant. There are, somewhat surprisingly, more neighbourhoods for which the closest food facility is a full-service restaurant than a convenience store.
- The median distance is just over one kilometre to the nearest supermarket (1,138 metres), specialty food store (1,113 metres), or limited-service restaurant (1,175 metres).
- The median distance to the nearest convenience store or a full-service restaurant tends to be shorter with distances of 600 to 700 metres.
- There are 82 neighbourhoods – approximately one in four – with neither a restaurant or food store, within walking distance.
- There are 104 neighbourhoods – approximately one in three – with, at best, a convenience store within walking distance.
- There are 193 neighbourhoods – more than one half – that are not within walking distance of a supermarket or even a specialty food store. Their access to healthy eating choices is therefore limited to the normally more expensive restaurant meals.
- There are 67 neighbourhoods or 20% of the total that have good access to food in the sense that they are within walking distance of a variety of food facilities including at least one supermarket, at least one full-service restaurant, and at least one convenience store. These neighbourhoods tend to be centred on the relatively few supermarkets in Regina.

The distances of food facilities were compared with the demographic and socioeconomic characteristics of those living in the neighbourhoods using the most recent census data.

Generally speaking, those with lower socioeconomic status had better access to food services than average. This was in part because these Regina residents tend to live in the central part of the city where access is often better. For example, compared with the city average gross income of $36,000 in 2005, those not within walking distance of any kind of food facility had an average income of $40,900. Among those who have good food choices, the average income was $34,100.

The analysis found that children and those who were employed tend to have poorer access to food facilities in the sense that they have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance. Compared with 32% of Regina residents, the percentage of groups in this category was:

- 24% of seniors;
- 36% of children;
- 24% of lone-parent families;
- 21% persons who report an Aboriginal identity;
- 26% of recent immigrants;
- 25% of those with less than a Grade 12 education; and
- 33% of those who were employed.

The analysis found that good access to a variety of food facilities within walking distance was relatively uniformly distributed among population groups although seniors and recent immigrants tended to have somewhat better access. Compared with 20% of Regina residents, the percentage of groups in this category was:

- 29% of seniors;
- 19% of children;
- 21% of lone-parent families;
- 19% persons who report an Aboriginal identity;
- 25% of recent immigrants;
- 18% of those with less than a Grade 12 education; and
- 19% of those who were employed.

SECTION 1: BACKGROUND AND DATA SOURCES

This report is a summary of research undertaken for the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region and Saskatchewan in Motion. A steering committee composed of representatives from the two organizations guided the research.

The research was conducted and this report was prepared by Doug Elliott, the principal of QED Information Systems Inc. and publisher of Sask Trends Monitor. The opinions expressed in this document do not necessarily represent those of the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region or Saskatchewan in motion. Responsibility for the accuracy of the data and the validity of the conclusions reached remains with the author.

The purpose of the research was to describe, in quantitative terms, the kinds of access that Regina residents have to restaurants and grocery stores. This is intended to provide community stakeholders with the information they need to help address some of the problems with access to healthy food in the city<sup>1</sup>. The research is part of a broader initiative to help make Regina a healthy and active city.

The report is divided into five sections (including this introduction) and an executive summary. Section 2 describes the food distribution facilities, called simply “food facilities” in this report, and how they are classified into seven different categories. Section 3 describes the “neighbourhoods” used and how distances from neighbourhoods to food facilities are calculated. Section 4 has the bulk of the analysis showing how far Regina residents are from the different kinds of food facilities. Section 5 goes into more detail about the socioeconomic characteristics of the residents in each of the neighbourhoods and how they relate to food access.

The list of food facilities and their categories are included as Appendix A (those excluded from the study) and Appendix B (those included in the study). Appendix C has several maps showing the locations of the different kinds of food facilities in the city. Appendix D has the list of neighbourhoods and their nearest food facility. For reference, Appendix E shows a selected number of city facilities and services.

SECTION 2: THE CLASSIFICATION OF FOOD DISTRIBUTION FACILITIES

The best source of information about food distribution centres in Regina is a file maintained by the Public Health Inspectors who work for the Environmental Health Department of the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region. Inspectors conduct inspections of restaurants, temporary food events, bakeries, delis, grocery stores – in fact, any facility that provides food to the public on a temporary or permanent basis.

The list of these facilities in the Regina Qu'Appelle Health Region in October 2011 was used as a starting point for the analysis because it is the most comprehensive listing of restaurants, grocery stores, convenience stores, and specialized food retailers in the city. Food facilities are constantly in a state of flux so some of those in the study will have closed by the time this research was finalized whereas others will have opened in the intervening months.

Removing Facilities that were Out of Scope

The first step in the analysis was the removal of facilities that were not part of the analysis. Table 2.1 on the next page describes how more than one half of this initial list of 1,545 facilities was removed before beginning the analysis and the reason for the removal. Besides the large proportion of facilities that were located in the health region but not in Regina, the main reason for removing a facility was that it was not regularly and readily available to the general public. With these exclusions there were 631 food distribution facilities in Regina that were included in the study.

The list of food facilities that were excluded from the analysis is included as Appendix A. It is provided so the readers have a more complete listing of food facilities in the city.

Table 2.1 Food Distribution Centres Not Included in the Study

Reason for Removal	Comment or example	Number of facilities removed	Number of facilities remaining
Original number of facilities			1,545
Not in Regina City	The list included all the facilities in the RQHR; many are not located in Regina City.	478	1,067
Mobile or catering establishments	The analysis is for specific locations. Facilities that offer services from trailers or do catering have no specific location.	50	1,017
Farmers market participants	The individuals regularly involved in the farmers market were not included because the food service is only available for part of the year.	42	975
Institutions	Cafeterias that are part of institutions such as schools, senior's care facilities, or hospitals were excluded because the general public has limited or no access.	54	921
Limited access	A relatively large number of facilities are not available to the general public or if they are, are available only at specific times or with additional charges. These were excluded from the analysis. Some examples are facilities in the Brandt Centre or Taylor Field, food service in golf courses, bowling alleys, or churches.	145	776
Duplicates	A single location can have more than one kind of food service so it was listed more than once. Typically these are grocery stores with bake shops or delis that operating as part of the establishment. The "main" activity was used for analysis and the other activities were removed as duplicates.	109	667
Other reasons	A number of other facilities were classified as out of scope because they clearly didn't belong in the study. Some examples are video rental stores, chocolate shops, and wine stores.	36	631
Number of facilities included in the study			631

Classification of Facilities

The next stage in the analysis involved classifying the 631 food facilities into categories that represent the kind of food and the degree of preparation for food offered for sale to the public. There are two general categories:

- restaurants offer prepared foods either to eat in or take out; and
- food stores sell the raw ingredients or pre-packed food.

There is in fact, quite a good deal of overlap between these categories. Many supermarkets, for example, have “deli bars” that sell take-out food and some restaurants sell baked goods to take home.

Within these categories, a wide variety of different kinds of facilities are available and classifying them is more of an art than a science. Restaurants were classified into four subgroups and food stores into three subgroups.

The criteria used for the classification was based on the quantity and variety of different kinds of food available. The four kinds of restaurants were as follows.

Full-service Restaurants

Full-service restaurants offer a variety of different kinds of meals even if they may specialize in a certain kind of cuisine such as Vietnamese, Greek, or Italian. While they may offer a take-out service, their primary clientele eat in. It will always be possible for a family to eat a healthy balanced meal at one of these kinds of restaurants.

Quick-service Restaurants

These kinds of restaurants typically specialize in hamburgers, submarine sandwiches, or pizzas. They may offer a place to sit and eat but there is no table service so even patrons who eat in the facility typically pick up the food from a self-serve counter. Almost all of the facilities in food courts in shopping malls are in this category as are the stand-alone fast food restaurants such as Burger King, KFC, MacDonald's, Subway, and Pizza Hut. It will be possible to have a healthy meal at these kinds of establishments because many offer salads and fresh vegetables. Many of the foods, however, will be high in fat, salt, or sugar.

Limited-service Restaurants/Coffee Shops

These kinds of restaurants may offer either table service or take-out service but they differ from the previous two categories because they typically offer only one kind of food or a limited selection of food if they are primarily a coffee shop. One would be hard pressed to have a meal (rather than a snack) at these kinds of restaurants. Some examples include specialty coffee shops and places that offer only deserts. After some deliberation, it was decided to put the doughnut shops such as Tim Horton's and Robins Donuts in this category. It will be difficult to have a balanced healthy meal at these kinds of establishments because of the limited menu choices.

Bars with Food Service

This category includes facilities whose primary focus is serving alcohol although they also have a food menu. Almost all bars and nightclubs in the city serve at least some hot food and many restaurants have extensive wine lists so distinguishing between restaurants and bars was difficult. Restaurants with affiliated lounges were classified as restaurants. It may be possible to have a healthy meal at these establishments but many of the foods will be high in fat or salt. Families would not be able to eat in these kinds of establishments because minors are not allowed.

There were three subcategories of food stores used in the analysis. The distinguishing feature is the variety of food available.

Supermarkets

Supermarkets offer a selection of fresh, frozen, and canned food in each of the food groups so it will always be possible to purchase healthy ingredients at these kinds of stores. We were fairly generous in classifying smaller establishments such as Lakeview Fine Foods, Dads Organic Market, and the Ukrainian Coop as supermarkets even though their selection of foods is more limited than in the larger establishments.

Specialty Food Stores

These kinds of stores are common in Regina – they offer a selection of foods that is limited in some way. They specialize in meat (e.g. butcher shops) or baked goods (e.g. bakeries) or a particular kind of food product (e.g. Korean, Asian, Indian). One would usually need to go to more than one of these kinds of stores to obtain a balanced meal.

Convenience Stores

There are a lot of convenience stores in Regina. These kinds of stores often offer a variety of dairy products and packaged products but their distinguishing feature is that they often have a limited or no selection of fresh food, particularly fresh fruit, vegetables, and meat. A shopper would find it difficult to obtain the ingredients for a balance meal from these kinds of stores. Many are associated with gasoline service stations.

These food facilities do not limit a customer's choices, a priori, to either “good” or “bad” food but some offer a greater variety of food choices than others. A lot will depend on what the customer chooses to purchase. Nevertheless, healthy choices will be harder to find in some kinds of facilities than in other kinds.

The number of facilities in each category is shown in Table 2.2 on the next page. Approximately one-third of the food facilities in Regina are food stores and two-thirds are restaurants.

The list of food facilities and their classification is included in Appendix B of this report. Appendix D has maps showing the locations for each kind of food facility.

Table 2.2 Food Distribution Centres Included in the Study

Category	Comment or example	Number of facilities
Full-service restaurants	Full-service restaurants offer a variety of different kinds of meals even if they may specialize in a certain kind of cuisine	188
Limited-service restaurants/coffee shops	These kinds of restaurants may offer either table service or take-out service but they typically offer only one kind of food or a limited selection of food if they are primarily a coffee shop.	42
Quick-service restaurants	These kinds of restaurants typically specialize in hamburgers, submarine sandwiches, or pizzas. They may offer a place to sit and eat but there is no table service. All facilities in food courts were put in this category.	180
Bars with food service	The main difference between a bar and a restaurant is that a) minors are not allowed in bars, and b) the focus of the bar's sales are alcohol rather than food.	25
Supermarkets	Supermarkets offer a selection of fresh, frozen, and canned food in each of the food groups.	25
Specialty food stores	These kinds of stores offer a selection of foods that is limited in some way. They specialize in meat or baked goods or a particular kind of food products (e.g. Korean, Asian, Indian) or in food supplements.	59
Convenience stores	These kinds of stores often offer a variety of dairy products and packaged products but their distinguishing feature is that they often have a limited selection of fresh food, particularly fresh fruit, vegetables, and meat.	112

SECTION 3: SPECIFYING THE NEIGHBOURHOODS IN REGINA

Matching people with food facilities involves choosing the neighbourhoods for Regina City residents. In principle, every household would have a unique set of food facilities to which they could go but this is not workable in practise so the analysis was done by clusters of households rather than individual addresses. The geographic units chosen for the analysis were the “dissemination areas” used by Statistics Canada for the 2006 census – called “neighbourhoods” in the balance of this report.

There are advantages and disadvantages of using dissemination areas for the neighbourhoods in Regina.

- There are 333 dissemination areas so the level of detail is workable – neither too small nor too large for the analysis. The average population in a Regina dissemination area was 538 in 2006 but several have more than 1,000 persons.
- The dissemination areas correspond to the units that Statistics Canada uses for the publication of socioeconomic data from the census so we have ready access to the characteristics of individuals in each dissemination area.
- Some dissemination areas are very large because they include industrial areas of the city. To overcome this limitation, we altered the boundaries so that they represent, as closely as possible, the areas in which people live.
- Because the 2011 census data were not available at the time this research was completed, some areas, Harbour Landing, for example, are not included.
- Dissemination areas do not always correspond to what we think of as “neighbourhoods” because they are chosen by Statistics Canada for statistical purposes.

To calculate the distance from the neighbourhood to the food facility, an approximation technique was used<sup>2</sup> as follows.

- The centroid, which is the centre point of the area corresponding to the neighbourhood, was used to represent the residents of the neighbourhood. Residents near the edge of the neighbourhood will be slightly nearer or slightly further from a given food facility than those at the centre.
- The distance measured uses the length of the triangle (A + B in the diagram on the right) in the figure rather than the distance “as the crow flies” which is distance C. The longer distance is more representative of walking or driving routes in the city because the streets are typically laid out in a rectangular grid.
- The methodology cannot take into account such things as one-way streets or obstacles such as railway tracks or freeways.

<sup>2</sup> In principle, one could calculate the distance using the same algorithms that are used by GPS devices but these algorithms are extremely complex and that degree of precision was not considered necessary for this project.

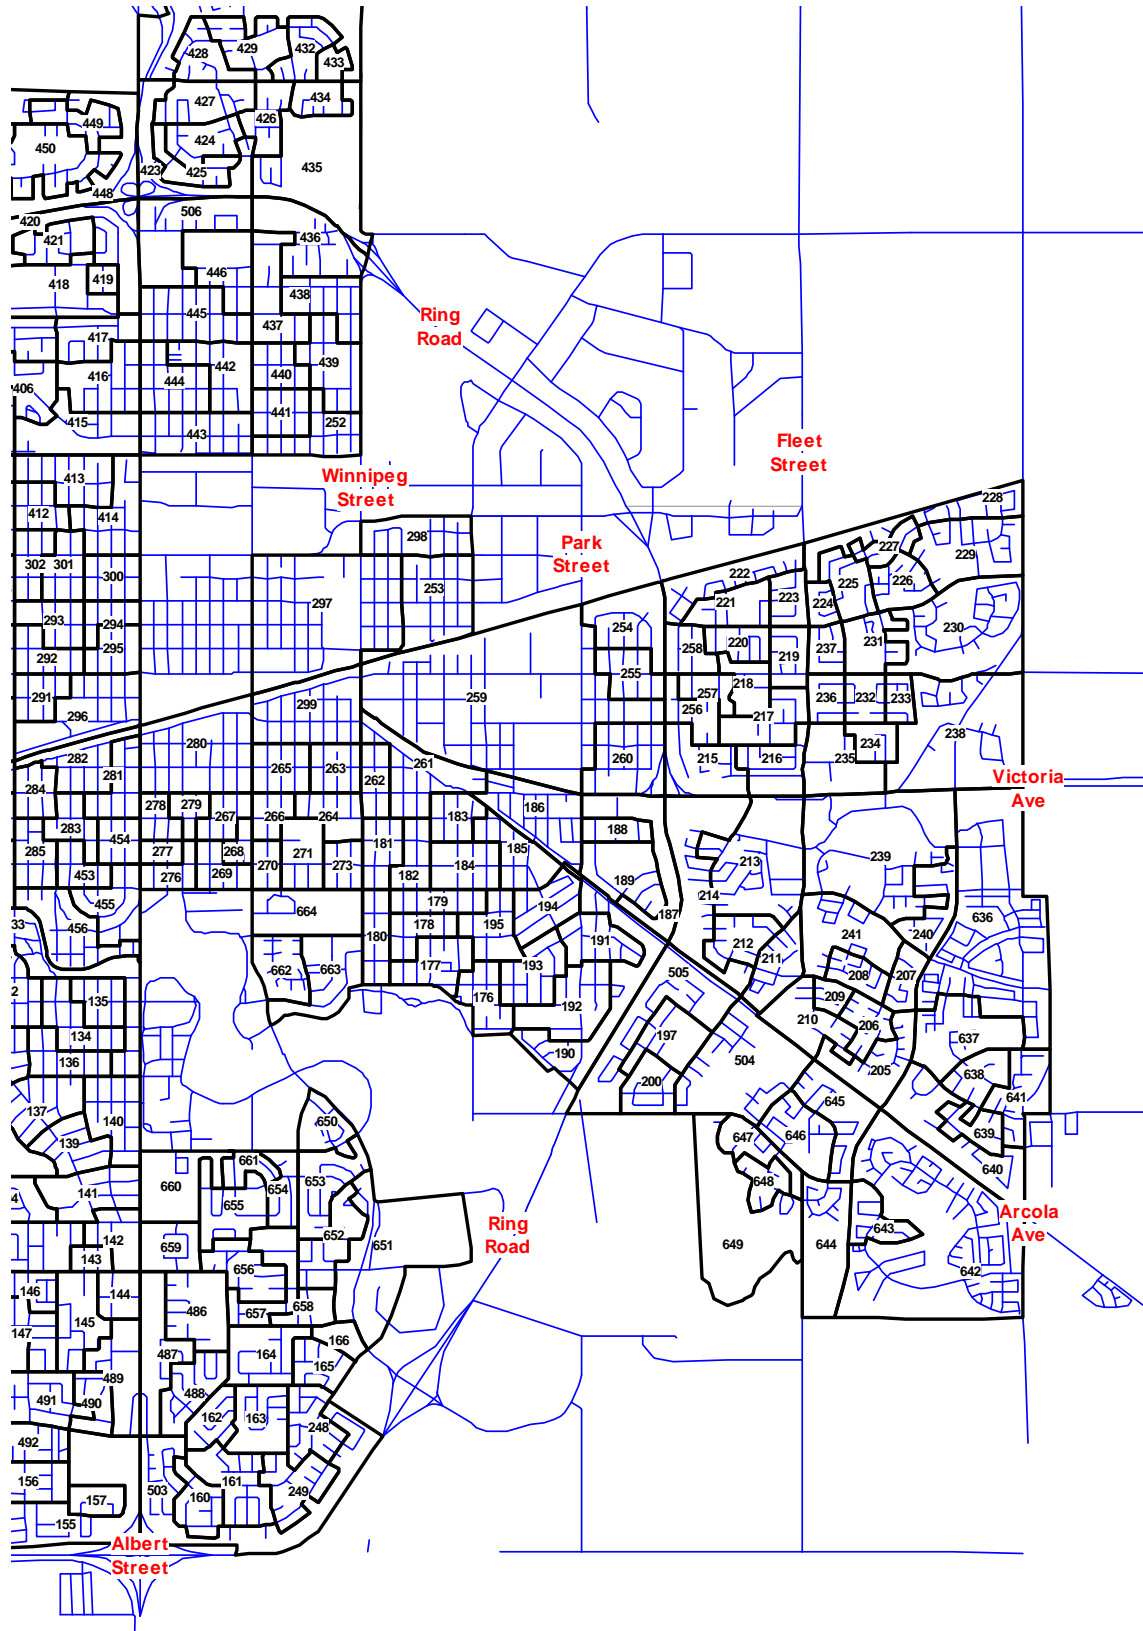

With 333 neighbourhoods and 631 food facilities in the city, there are just over 210,000 neighbourhood-facility pairs for which distances are calculated.

Figures 3.1 and 3.2 show the 333 neighbourhoods in the city with the three-digit “dissemination area code” shown for reference purposes. These dissemination area codes are needed when referencing the statistics in Appendix D.

SECTION 4: DISTANCES TO FOOD FACILITIES

This section contains the bulk of the quantitative analysis, namely measuring the distance to the nearest food facility in each of the seven categories from each of the neighbourhoods. The next section looks at the demographic and socioeconomic status for neighbourhoods that are near to or far from certain kinds of food facilities.

This material is presented from three points of view.

- Section 4.1 looks at the nearest food facility of any kind, demonstrating that in the majority of Regina neighbourhoods, the nearest facility is either a full-service restaurant or convenience store. This answers the question “What is the nearest food facility to your neighbourhood?”.
- Section 4.2 looks at the distance to the nearest facility in each of the seven categories. It answers the question “How far is it from my neighbourhood to the nearest supermarket?” for example.
- Section 4.3 looks at certain kinds of neighbourhoods depending on the variety of food facilities within walking distance of the neighbourhood. This can help answer the questions such as “Which neighbourhoods do not have walking access to anything other than a convenience store?”.

4.1 The Nearest Food Facility

For 120 Regina neighbourhoods or 36% of the total, the nearest food facility of any kind is a full-service restaurant. There are, somewhat surprisingly, more neighbourhoods for which the closest food facility is a full-service restaurant than a convenience store. This may reflect the fact that many strip malls in or near residential areas have both a restaurant and a convenience store.

At the other end of the scale, the nearest facility is a bar for only ten neighbourhoods (3% of all neighbourhoods) or a supermarket for only twelve neighbourhoods (4%).

In between these two extremes, we find a quick-service restaurant is the closest facility for 15% of neighbourhoods and a limited-service restaurant the closest for 7% of neighbourhoods.

Figure 4.2 shows the median distance<sup>3</sup> to the nearest food facility for each of Regina's 333 neighbourhoods. This shows, for example, that the median distance is just over one kilometre to the nearest:

- supermarket (1,138 metres);
- specialty food store (1,113 metres); and
- limited-service restaurant (1,175 metres).

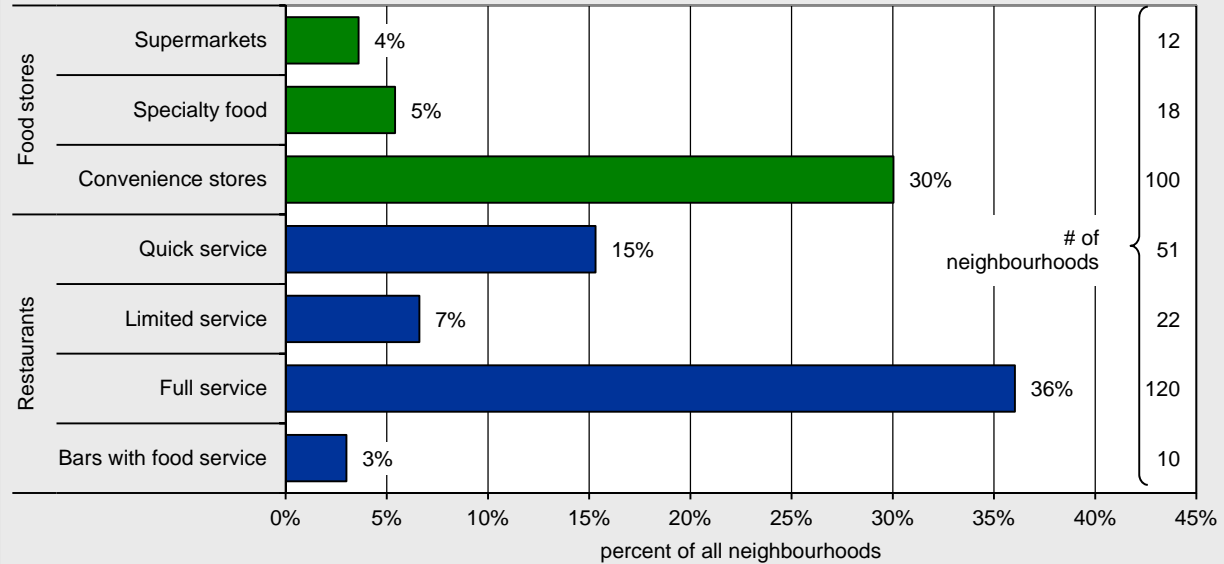

This means, for example, that one-half of Regina neighbourhoods are more than 1.1 kilometres from a supermarket.

The median distance to a convenience store or a full-service restaurant tends to be shorter with distances 600 to 700 metres. The median distance to the nearest bar is the furthest among the nine categories.

<sup>3</sup> The median distance is the point at which one-half of the neighbourhoods are closer and one-half more distance so it is like the "average" although it is not as affected by extremes.

Nearest Food Facility Among 333 Regina Neighbourhoods

Median Distance to the Nearest Food Facility Among 333 Regina Neighbourhoods

4.2 Distance to Nearest Food Facility

This section looks at the distances to the nearest food facility in each of the seven specific categories of food facilities described in Section 2. This may be the most useful indicator because it measures how far residents of a neighbourhood have to walk or drive in order to reach the specific kind of facility that they would like to patronize.

The groupings chosen are:

- less than 750 metres which is thought to be a comfortable walking distance for healthy adults in good weather;
- 750 metres to 1,499 metres with is potentially walkable but only for certain individuals and in certain kinds of weather;
- 1,500 to 2,499 metres which will probably require a bicycle or a vehicle; and
- 2.5 kilometres or more which will almost certainly be beyond walking distance.

Distance of Regina Neighbourhoods to Nearest Bar with Food Service

Bars and Restaurants

Figure 4.3 shows 22% of Regina neighbourhoods are within 750 metres of a bar and 14% are 2,500 metres or further away. The most common distance is 1,250 metres to 2,499 metres and the median distance is 1,301 metres.

The majority of Regina neighbourhoods are within walking distance of a full-service restaurant as Figure 4.4 shows. The median distance is 675 metres with 58% of neighbourhoods within 750 metres and 85% within 1.25 kilometres.

Figure 4.5 shows the range of distances to the nearest limited-service restaurant. These figures are similar to those for bars with 28% of neighbourhoods within 750 metres and more than one-half (54%) within 1,250 metres. The median distance was 1,175 metres.

Distance of Regina Neighbourhoods to Nearest Full-Service Restaurant

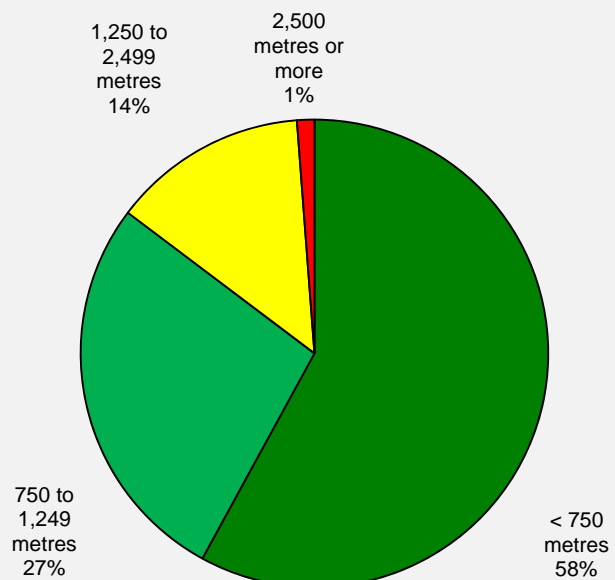

Figure 4.6 shows the distance to the nearest quick-service restaurant. The distribution of distances is similar to those in Figure 4.4 for full-service restaurants with three quarters (73%) of neighbourhoods within 1,250 metres.

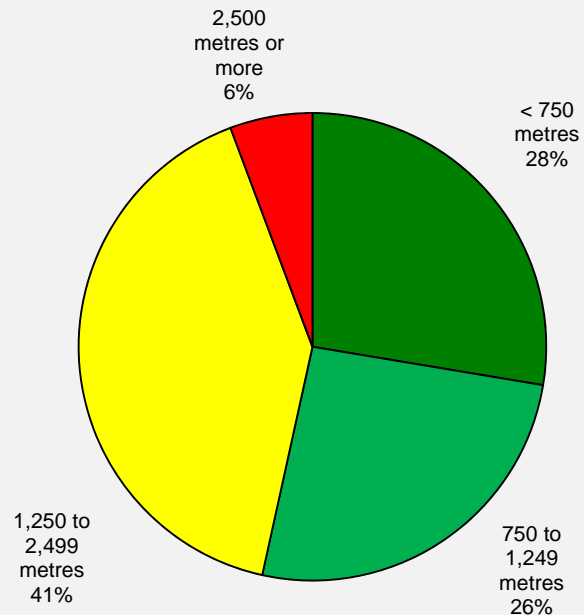

These figures show that in terms of restaurants, many Regina residents, perhaps even a majority, are within walking distance of a restaurant, probably a full-service restaurant and possibility a quick-service restaurant.

The maps in Figure 4.7 and Figure 4.8 show which neighbourhoods in Regina are within 750 metres of a full-service restaurant and a quick-service restaurant.

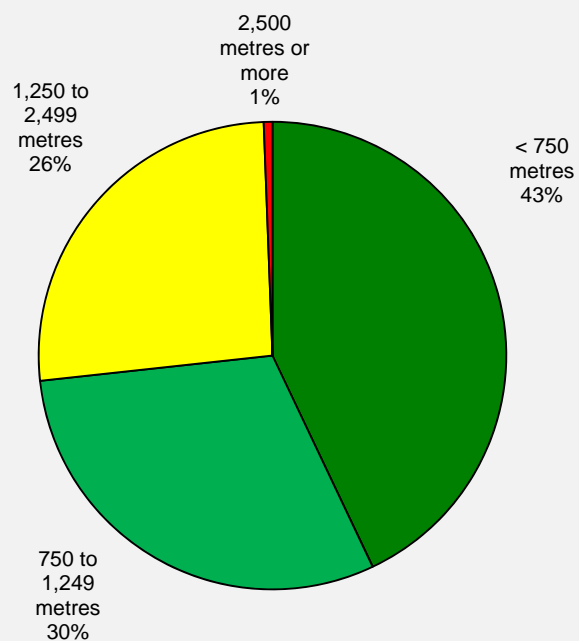

Access to at least one full-service restaurant is quite common for many Regina residents. The exceptions are those who live in Uplands or along the east side of the city away from Victoria Avenue. There is only sporadic access in the Northwest or in the South.

Access to quick-service restaurants is much more limited. The neighbourhoods along Albert Street, Victoria Avenue, and the Northwest tend to have access to more than one and those elsewhere in the city often have no access at all.

Grocery Stores

Convenience stores, as their name implies, are intended to be convenient places to shop so it is no surprise that almost all Regina neighbourhoods are relatively close to a convenience store. Figure 4.9 shows that almost two-thirds (63%) are within walking distance (taken as 750 metres) and 87% are within 1,250 metres. The median distance was 599 metres.

Figure 4.10 shows that the average neighbourhood is much further away from a specialty food store where the median distance is over one kilometre – 1,113 metres. Only a third of the neighbourhoods (32%) are within 750 metres and only 58% are within 1,250 metres.

The average neighbourhood is even further from a supermarket as Figure 4.11 shows. Here the median distance is 1,138 metres and only 23% of neighbourhoods are within 750 metres. In spite of this, only 5% of neighbourhoods are more than 2.5 kilometres from a supermarket.

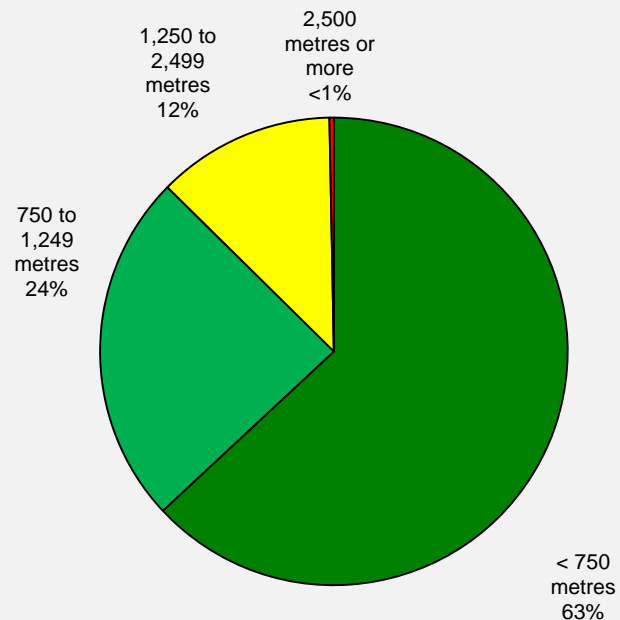

Figures 4.12 through 4.14 show the number of neighbourhoods that are within 750 metres of a convenience store, a specialty food store, and a supermarket, respectively.

Easy access to a convenience store is not as common as one might have expected. Figure 4.12 shows that there are 123 neighbourhoods that are further than 750 kilometres from a convenience store. A large number of them are in the Northwest and the East side of the city but there are pockets in most regions of the city that are not on or near the main thoroughfares.

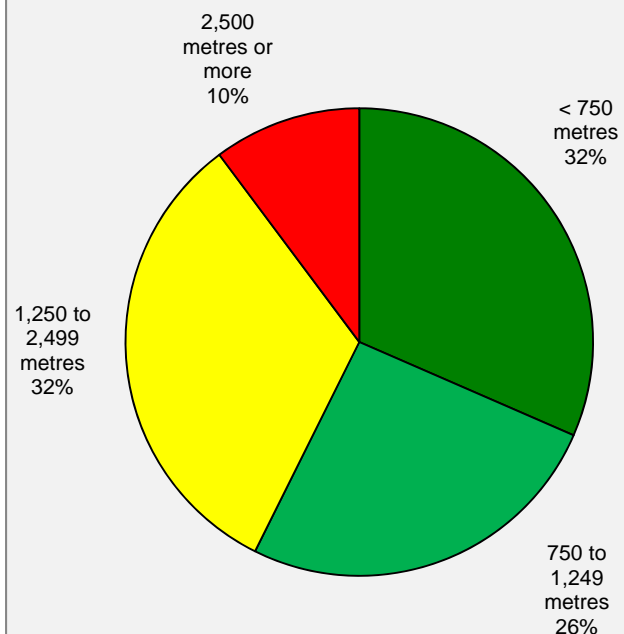

Access to specialty food stores is even more limited as Figure 4.13 shows. Here we find that only Regina residents who live along Albert Street or Victoria Avenue have easy access to these kinds of stores.

Distance of Regina Neighbourhoods to Nearest Convenience Store

Distance of Regina Neighbourhoods to Nearest Specialty Food Store

supermarkets exist in the city. There are clusters of neighbourhoods within walking distance of each and a few neighbourhoods in the South and East who have access to more than one.

Note that access for some neighbourhoods that seem to be near a supermarket are, in practise, quite far away. For example, several neighbourhoods would need to cross the Ring Road to get to the Northgate mall and several would need to cross 9th Avenue North to reach the Normanview mall.

4.3 Number of Food Facilities within Walking Distance

This section looks at the same data as the previous two sections but from a different perspective. Neighbourhoods with specific characteristics are examined.

The ones of particular interest that are included are:

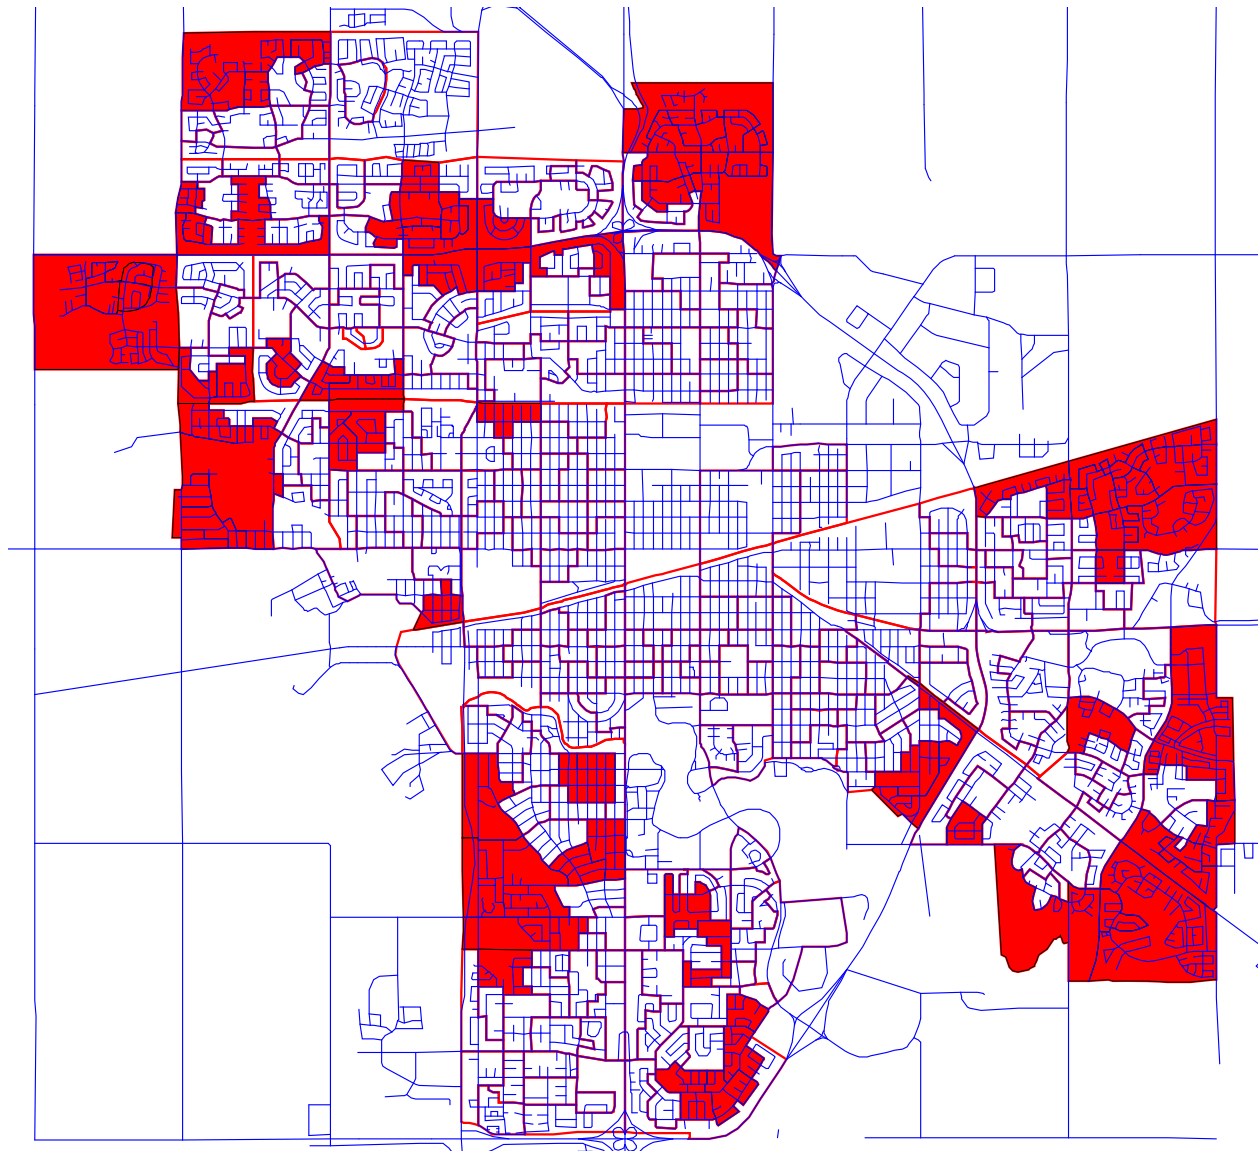

- neighbourhoods that are not within walking distance (< 750 metres) to any food facility;
- neighbourhoods that have either no food facility or only a convenience store within walking distance (< 750 metres);
- neighbourhoods that have only bars, restaurants, or a convenience store within walking distance (< 750 metres); and
- neighbourhoods that have good choices in the sense that they are within walking distance (< 750 metres) of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store.

Neighbourhoods That Are Not Within Walking Distance of Any Food Facility

These kinds of neighbourhoods have no food facility of any kind within walking distance. This means that they would probably need to drive or take a bus to buy groceries or go to a restaurant. There are 82 such neighbourhoods in Regina – approximately one in four.

Figure 4.15 shows that there are several clusters of these kinds of neighbourhoods on the outskirts of the city including the Uplands area, the Northwest, East, and Southeast quadrants.

Neighbourhoods That Have Either No Food Facility or Only a Convenience Store Within Walking Distance

These kinds of neighbourhoods have, at best, a convenience store within walking distance. They would probably need to drive or take a bus to buy groceries or go to a restaurant. There are 104 such neighbourhoods in Regina – approximately one in three.

Figure 4.16 shows that the inclusion of convenience stores expands the areas in Figure 4.15 that have no access at all. There are also several new areas such as parts of the Al Ritchie, Normanview, and North Central neighbourhoods with this level of access. Much of the Northwest and Southeast parts of the city are in this category.

Neighbourhoods That Have Only Bars, Restaurants, or a Convenience Store Within Walking Distance

These kinds of neighbourhoods may have good access to restaurants but they are not within walking distance of a supermarket or even a specialty food store. Their access to healthy eating choices is therefore limited to the normally more expensive restaurant meals.

The majority of Regina neighbourhoods (193 out of 333 or 58%) are in this category. Figure 4.17 shows that the exceptions are in the central part of the city and parts of the Northwest, the East, and the South.

Neighbourhoods with Good Access to Food Facilities

These kinds of neighbourhoods are within walking distance (< 750 metres) of a variety of food facilities including:

- at least one supermarket;
- at least one full-service restaurant; and
- at least one convenience store.

Figure 4.18 shows that there are relatively few such neighbourhoods in the city (67 out of 333 or 20%) and that they tend to be centred on the relatively few supermarkets in Regina.

SECTION 5: NEIGHBOURHOOD SOCIOECONOMIC AND DEMOGRAPHIC CHARACTERISTICS COMPARED WITH FOOD ACCESS

Neighbourhoods differ dramatically in their access to restaurants and grocery stores as this report has shown. They also differ in the kind of people who live in these neighbourhoods. In particular, there are differences by demographic indicators such as age, ethnicity, and living arrangements and differences by economic indicators such as education, employment, and income. This section compares the access to food facilities with some of these demographic and socioeconomic characteristics.

Unfortunately, at the time this report was prepared, the most recent neighbourhood-level data for Regina was the 2006 census so the socioeconomic and demographic data are badly out of date. On the other hand, these characteristics are slow to change so it is unlikely that 2011 data would yield substantially different conclusions.

Of the variety of demographic and socioeconomic statistics available, we have chosen eight summary measures for inclusion in the analysis:

- proportion of residents who are seniors (65 years of age and older);
- proportion of residents who are children (under 15 years of age);
- proportion of families that are headed by a lone parent;
- proportion of residents who report an Aboriginal identity;
- proportion of residents who moved to Canada less than fifteen years ago (i.e. after 1990);
- proportion of adults 25 to 64 years of age with less than a grade 12 education;
- proportion of adults 15 and older who are working;
- average gross personal income.

These characteristics are compared with the food access for the four kinds of neighbourhoods identified in Section 4.3 of this report.

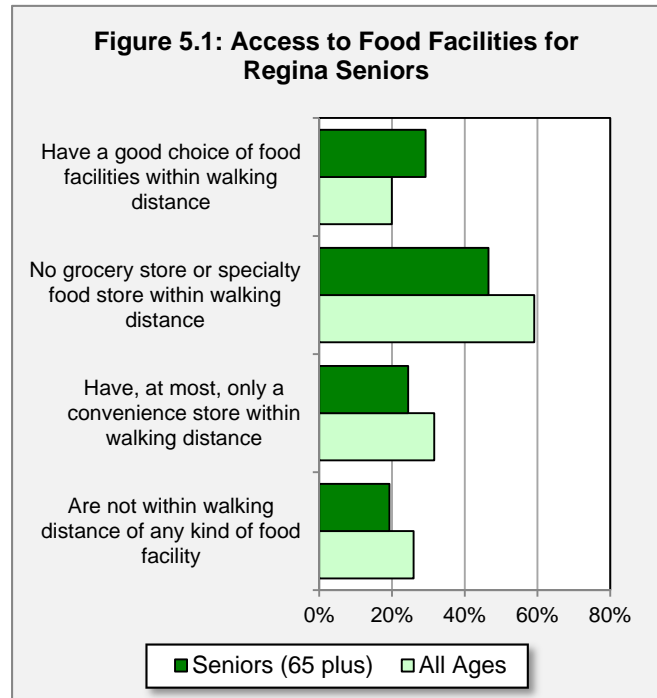

- neighbourhoods that are not within walking distance to any food facility;
- neighbourhoods that have either no food facility or only a convenience store within walking distance;
- neighbourhoods that have only bars, restaurants, or a convenience store within walking distance; and
- neighbourhoods that have good choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store.

5.1 Seniors

Seniors represent a special case among those who need access to good food for several reasons.

- Many seniors have limited mobility and therefore cannot walk long distances, particularly in the winter.
- Many do not drive and so are dependent on public transit, help from family or friends, or taxis to get to a grocery store.
- Many seniors are on fixed incomes so they are on a limited budget when it comes to food. On the other hand, many food stores and restaurants provide special discounts for seniors.

In 2006, 12.5% of Regina's population was 65 years of age or older. (The percentage will have increased since then.) Many are located in the central part of the city or at either end of Albert Street so their access to food is relatively good (see Figure 5.2). Figure 5.1 and Table 5.1 show that 20% of the general Regina population has good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among seniors, the proportion is even higher at 29%.

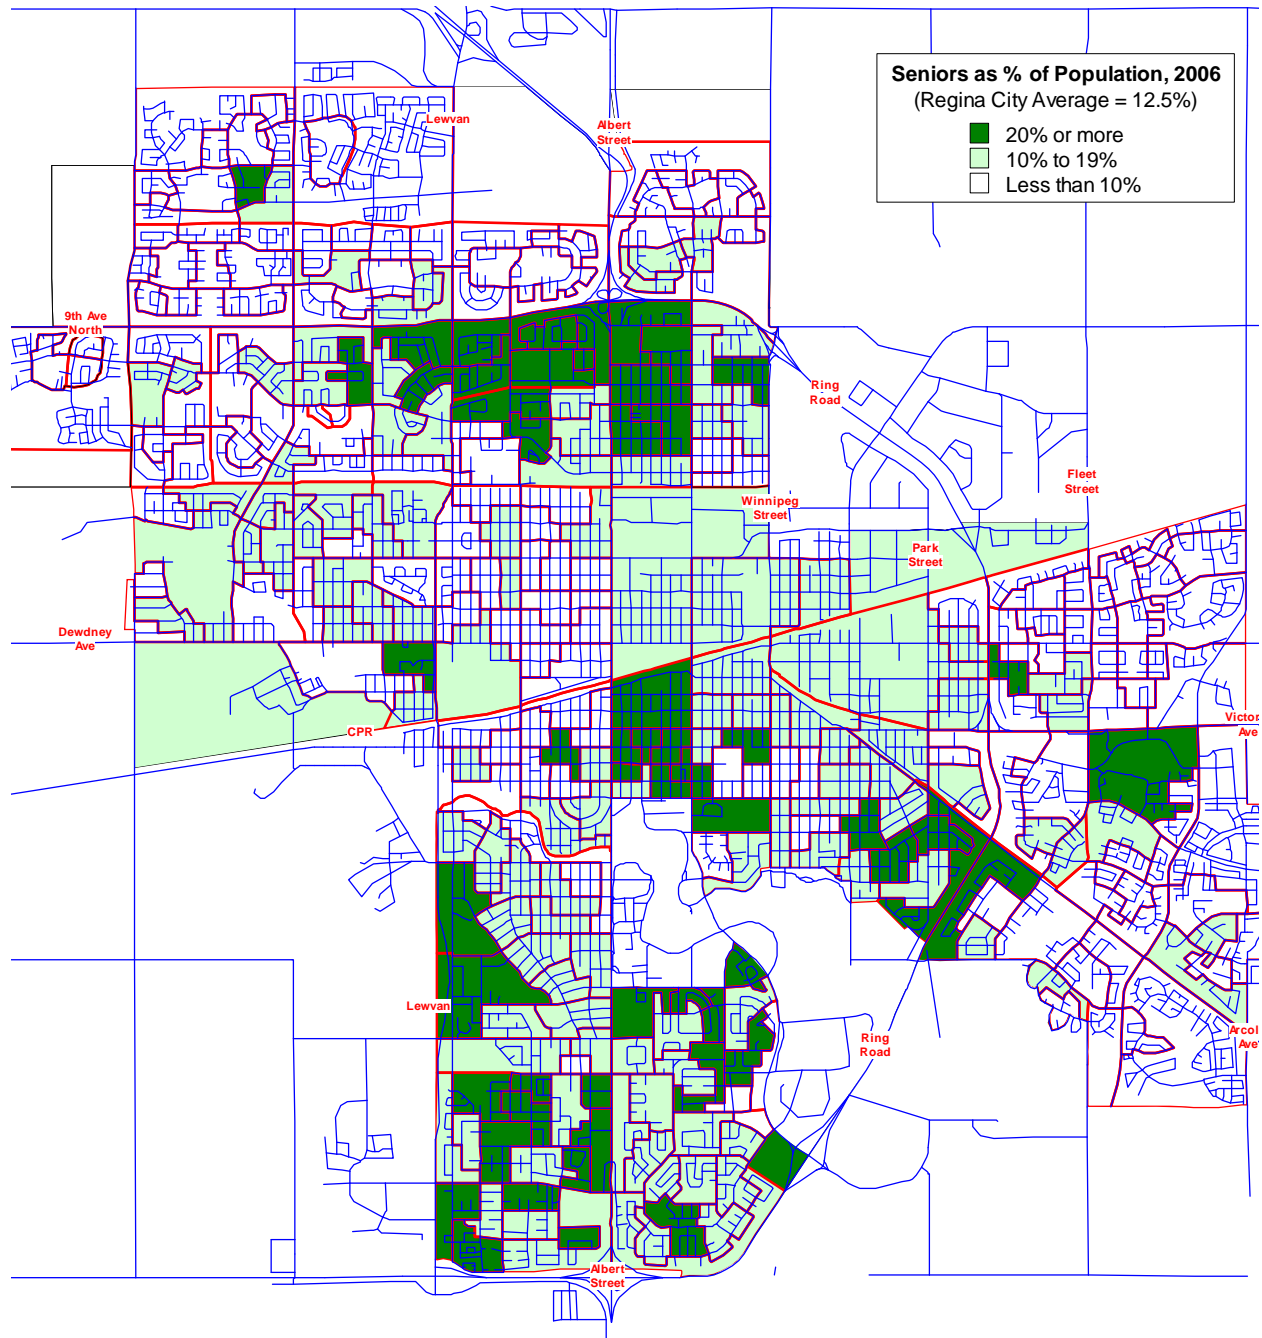

Near the other end of the scale, 32% of Regina residents have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance. This compares with 24% of seniors.

In summary, seniors tend to have better access to food services than other Regina residents although one in four has only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance. This represents more than 5,000 seniors with relatively poor access to food facilities.

Table 5.1: Access to Food Facilities Among Regina Seniors

	Total Population in 2006		Seniors (65 plus) in 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total

Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	56,656	32%	5,485	24%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	105,960	59%	10,430	47%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	35,743	20%	6,560	29%
All Regina city residents	179,246		22,420

5.2 Children

This section addresses the access that children have to food facilities by measuring, in effect, the access that their parents have.

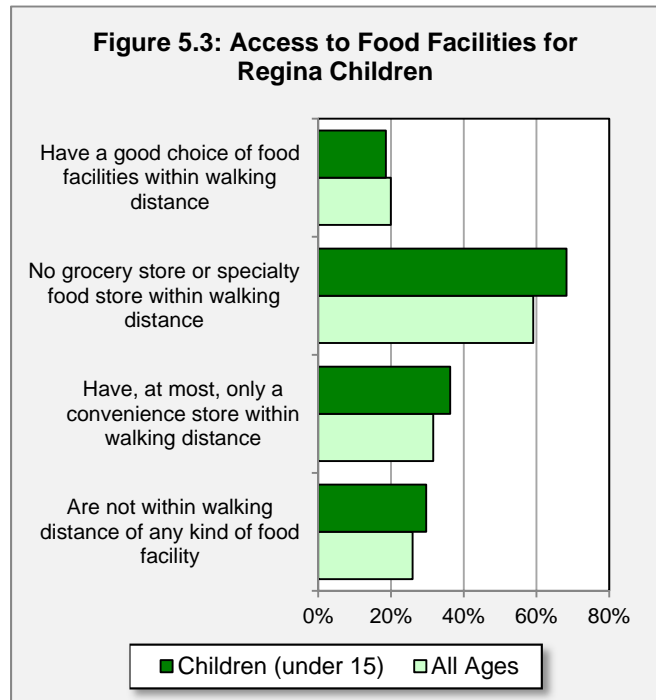

In 2006, 17.6% of Regina's population was under 15 years of age. Children tend to be located either in the inner city or in the newer parts of the city where young families live so many have relatively good access to food facilities (see Figure 5.4).

Figure 5.3 and Table 5.2 show that 20% of the general Regina population has good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among children, the proportion is similar at 19%.

Near the other end of the scale, 32% of Regina residents have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance.

This compares with 36% of children. And fully two thirds (68%) of children are in neighbourhoods that have no grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance.

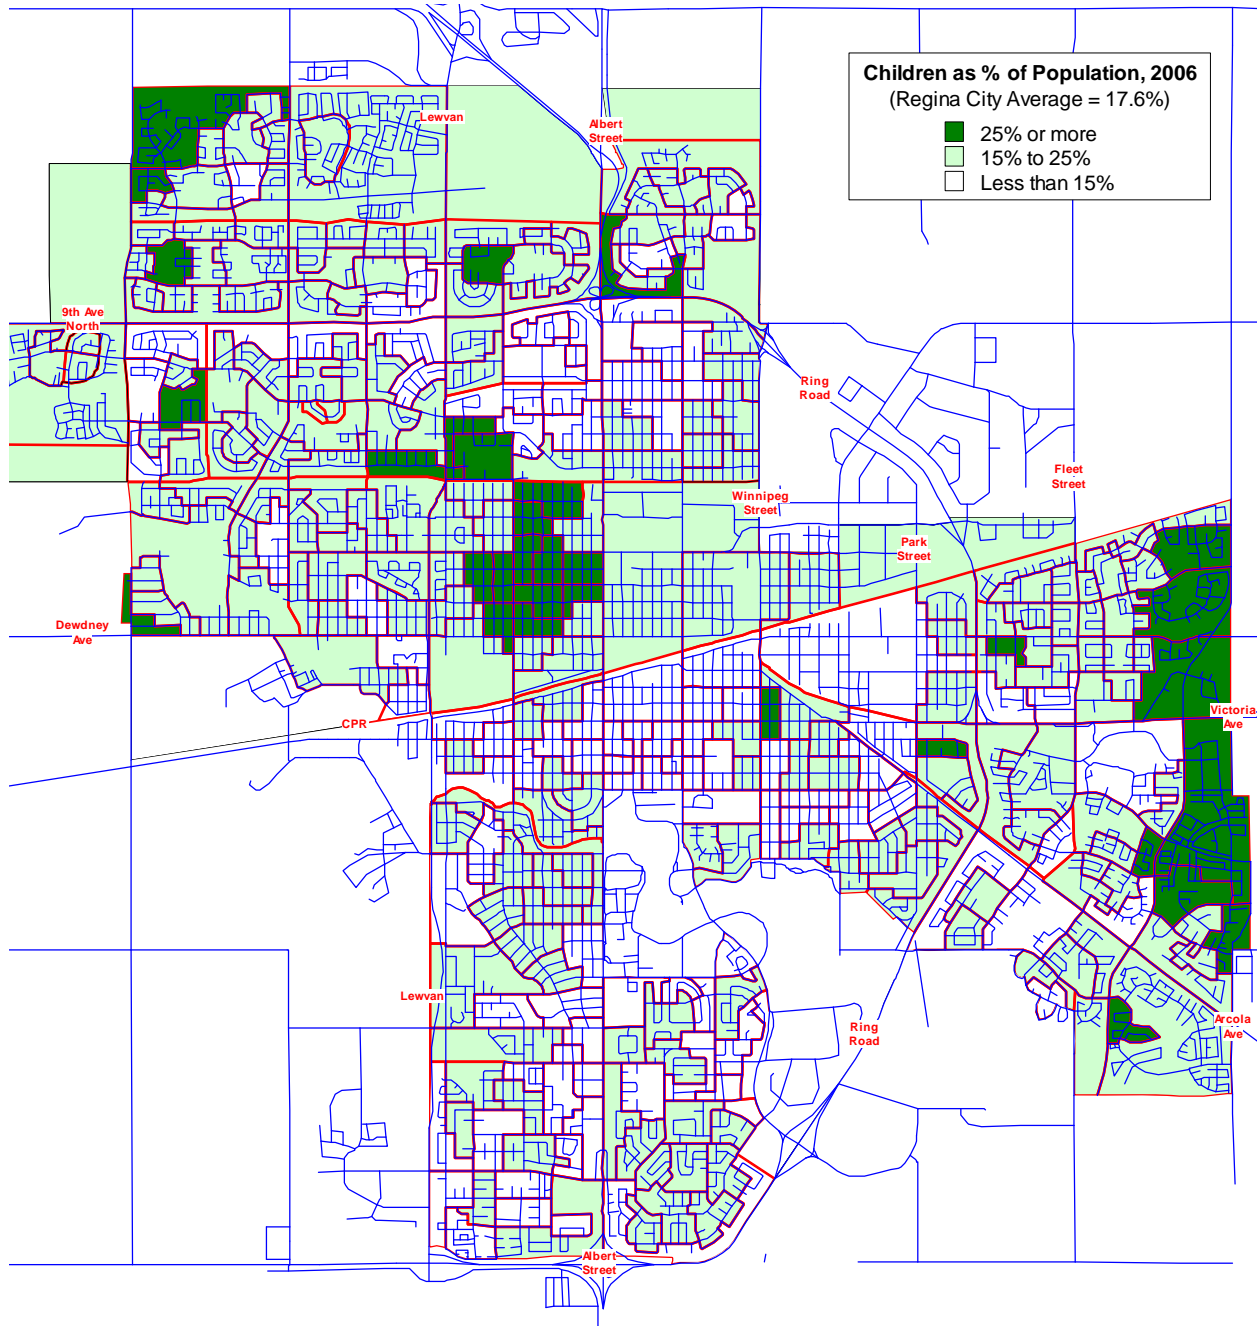

In summary, families with children tend to have similar but slightly poorer access to food services compared with other Regina residents. Fully a third have at best a convenience store within walking distance.

Table 5.2: Access to Food Facilities Among Regina Children

	Total Population in 2006		Children (under 15 years) in 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	46,457	26%	9,367	30%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	56,656	32%	11,446	36%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	105,960	59%	21,545	68%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	35,743	20%	5,868	19%
All Regina city residents	179,246		31,556

5.3 Lone Parent Families

This section addresses the access that lone parent families have to food facilities. Lone parent families are parents of any marital status with at least one of their own children living in the same dwelling. Others many also live in the same dwelling in an extended-family arrangement. There were 49,045 families in Regina in 2006 and 9,875 of these were lone-parent families – 20% of all Regina families. Lone parents represent a special case among those who need access to good food for several reasons.

- Many lone parents cannot afford to own a vehicle and so are dependent on public transit, help from family or friends, or taxis to get to a grocery store.
- Many lone parents have low incomes because they are not employed so they are on a limited budget when it comes to food.

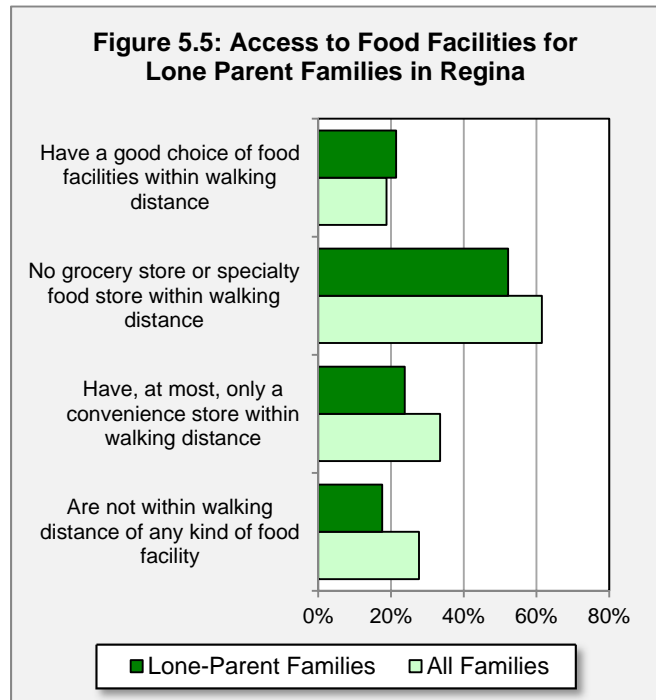

Figure 5.5 and Table 5.3 show that 19% of the families in Regina have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among lone-parent families, the proportion is slightly higher at 21%.

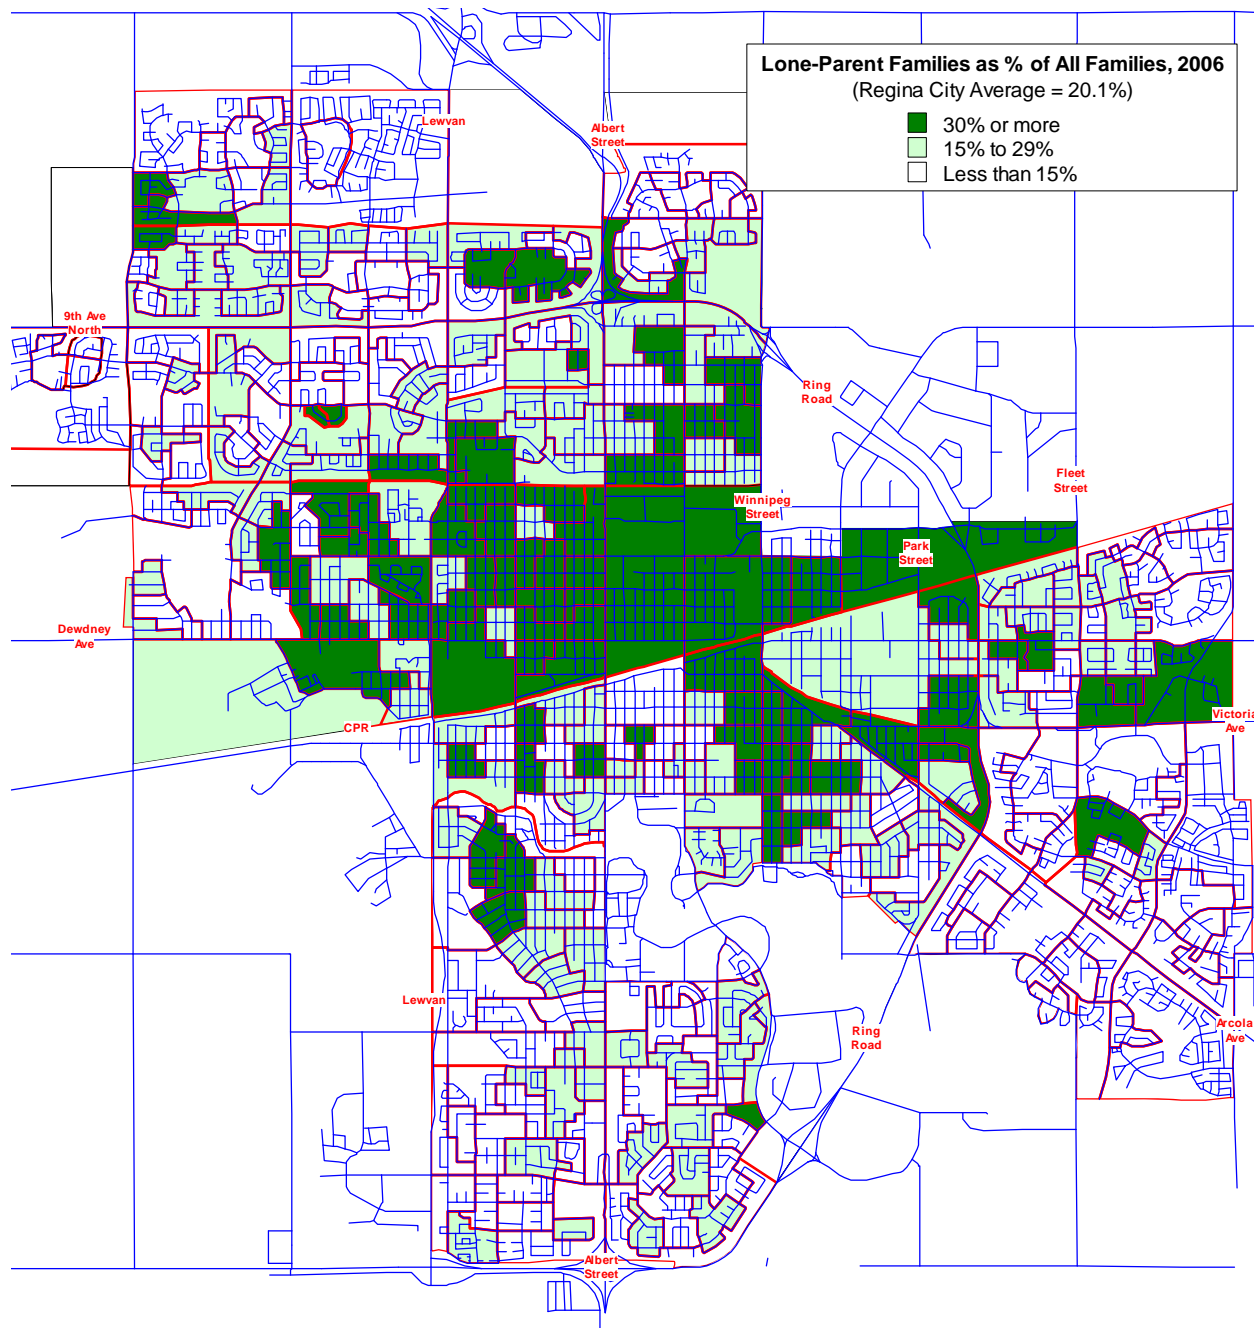

Near the other end of the scale, 34% of Regina families have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance. This compares with 24% of lone-parent families.

In summary, lone-parent families tend to have somewhat better access to food services compared with other Regina families. Notwithstanding this general observation, there are still 2,350 lone parent families with, at best, a convenience store within walking distance.

Table 5.3: Access to Food Facilities Among Lone Parent Families in Regina

	Census Families in 2006		Lone-Parent Families in 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	13,590	28%	1,735	18%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	16,435	34%	2,350	24%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	30,145	61%	5,155	52%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	9,205	19%	2,115	21%
All Regina city residents	49,045		9,875

5.4 Aboriginal Identity

This section addresses the access that persons who report an Aboriginal identity have to food facilities. Aboriginal identity refers to those persons who:

- reported identifying with at least one Aboriginal group, i.e. North American Indian, Métis or Inuit; or
- who reported being a Treaty Indian or a Registered Indian as defined by the Indian Act of Canada; or
- who were members of an Indian Band or First Nation.

There were 16,530 persons living in Regina in 2006 who reported an Aboriginal identity – the equivalent of 9.2% of the population.

Aboriginal people represent a special case among those who need access to good food for several reasons.

- Many have low incomes and so cannot afford to own a vehicle and so are dependent on public transit, help from family or friends, or taxis to get to a grocery store.
- A disproportionate number of Aboriginal people are children.
- Other studies have shown Aboriginal people have an above-average level of obesity.

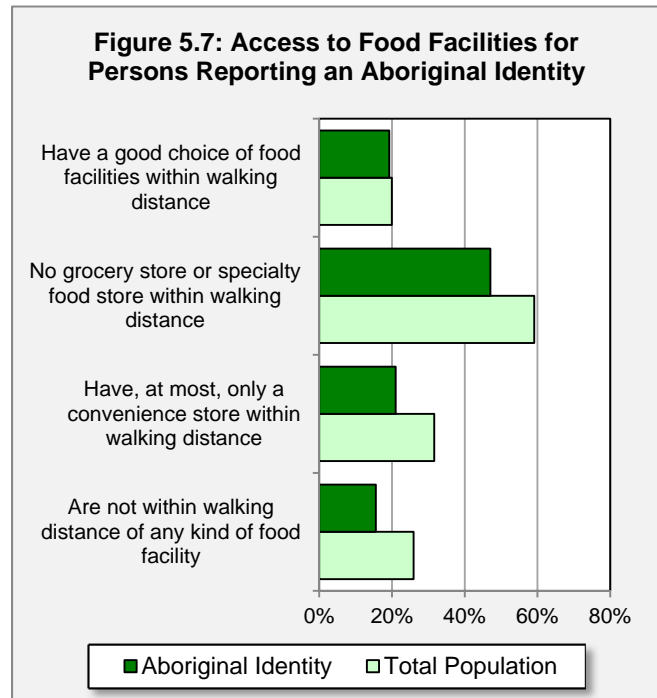

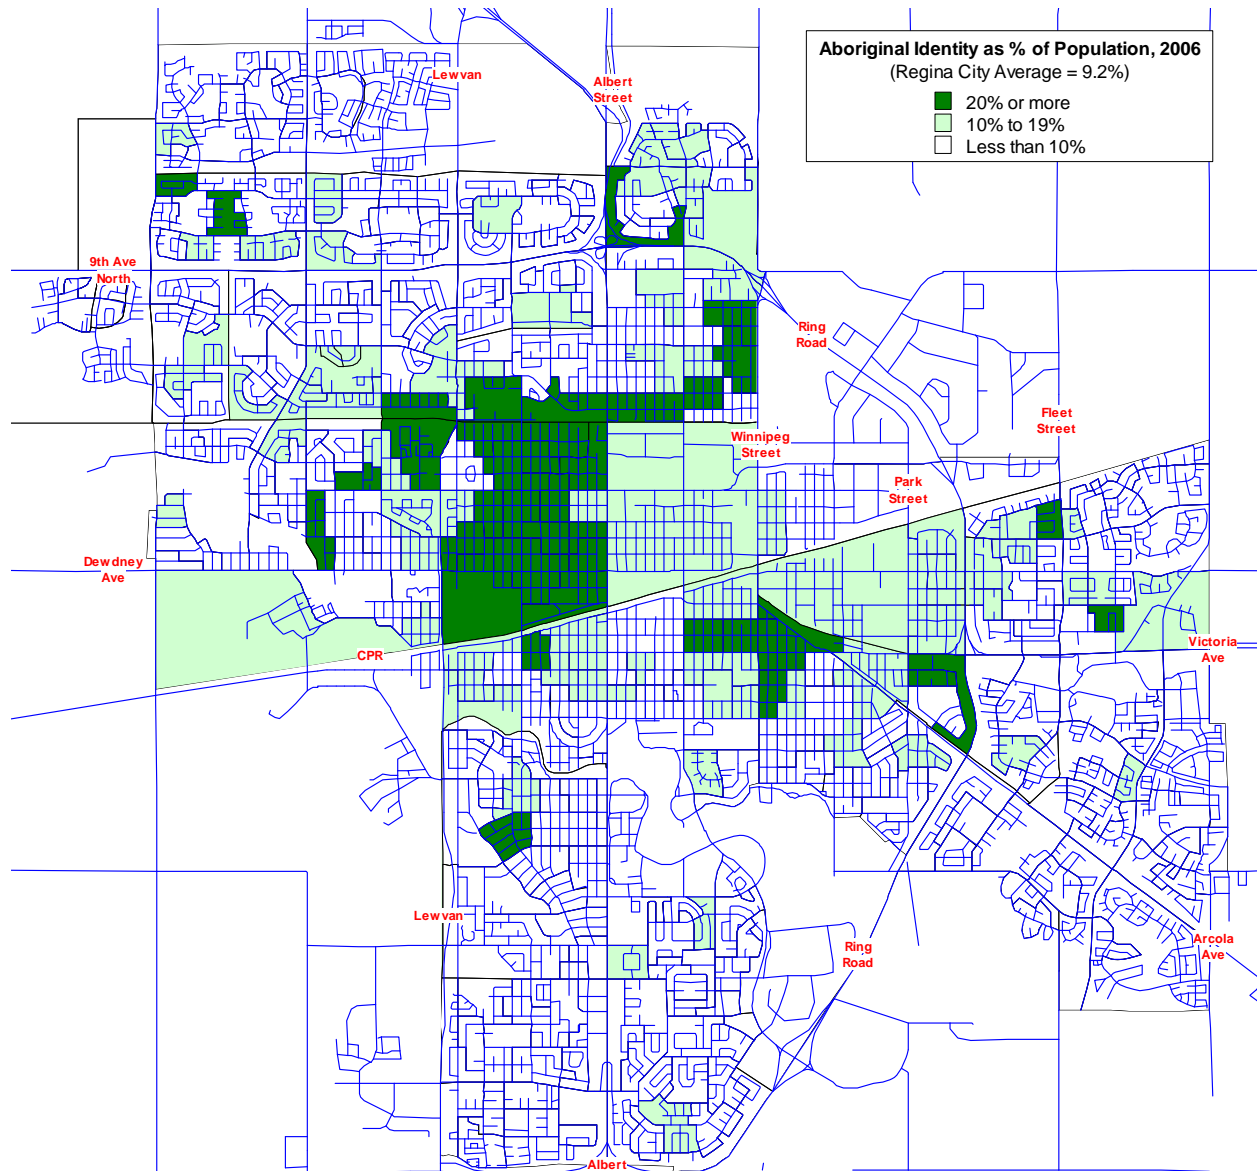

Figure 5.7 and Table 5.4 show that Aboriginal people tend to have relatively good access to food services in Regina. For example, 20% of Regina residents have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among Aboriginal people, the proportion is 19%. Near the other end of the scale, 32% of Regina residents have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance compared with 21% of Aboriginal people.

Table 5.4: Access to Food Facilities Among Persons Reporting an Aboriginal Identity

	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	46,457	26%	2,570	16%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	56,656	32%	3,470	21%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	105,960	59%	7,780	47%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	35,743	20%	3,180	19%
All Regina city residents	179,246		16,530

5.5 Recent Immigrants

This section addresses the access that persons who are recent immigrants to Canada have to food facilities. Recent immigrants were selected to be those who have moved to Canada after 1990 which means that in 2006, they would have been living in Canada for fifteen years or less. Note that temporary residents such as those who are living in the city under a student visa are not considered as immigrants and that recent immigrants may have lived in Regina for only a short period of time even if they came to Canada in the last fifteen years.

There were 5,590 recent immigrants in Regina in 2006, the equivalent of 3.1% of the population, but the number will have increased substantially since then. The choices of neighbourhoods that immigrants have made since 2006 are not known. Figure 5.10 shows that recent immigrants are widely dispersed in the city.

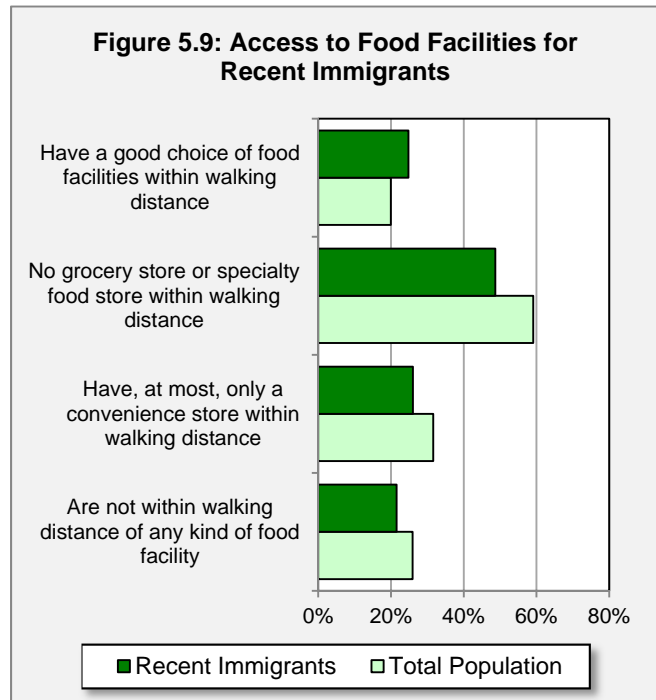

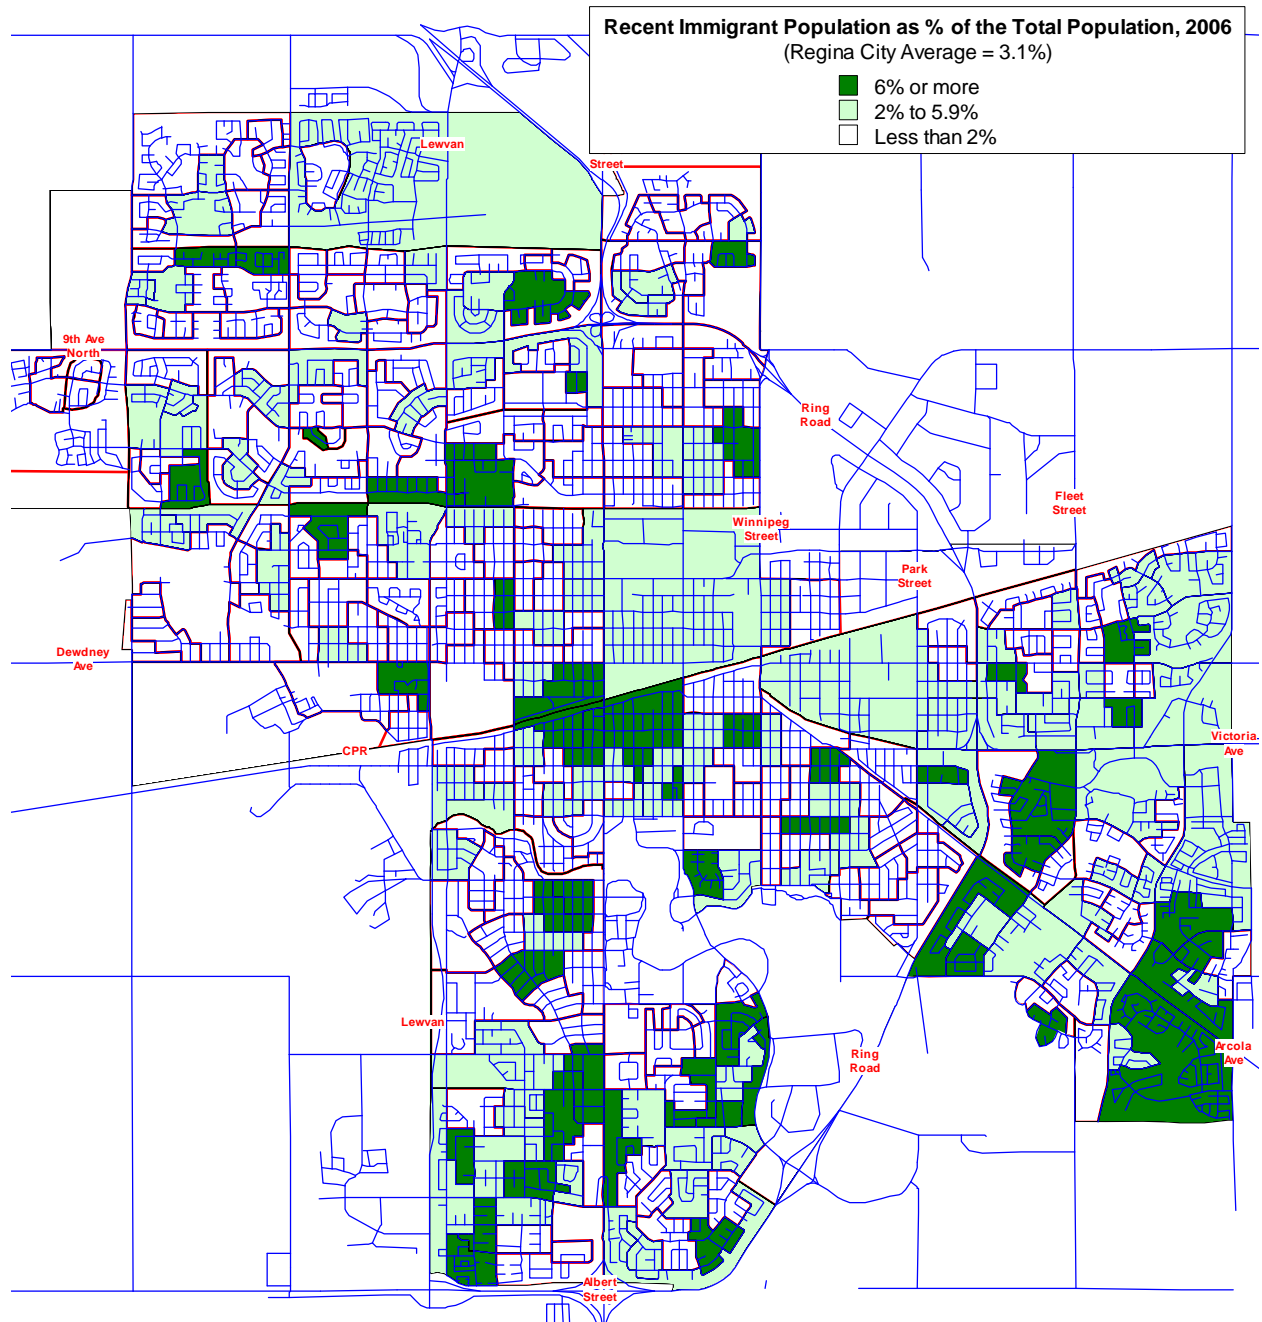

Figure 5.9 and Table 5.5 show that recent immigrants tend to have relatively good access to food services in Regina. For example, 20% of Regina residents have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among recent immigrants, the proportion is 25%. Near the other end of the scale, 32% of Regina residents have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance compared with 26% of recent immigrants.

Notwithstanding the generally better access, a quarter of recent immigrants (26%) had, at best, a convenience store within walking distance.

Table 5.5: Access to Food Facilities Among Recent Immigrants

	All Regina Residents in 2006		Recent Immigrants (after 1990) in 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	46,457	26%	1,205	22%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	56,656	32%	1,455	26%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	105,960	59%	2,720	49%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	35,743	20%	1,385	25%
All Regina city residents	179,246		5,590

5.6 Low Levels of Formal Education

This section addresses access to food facilities for those adults who report low levels of formal education. For the purposes of this analysis, the group was limited to be those who were 25 to 64 years of age in 2006. For low levels of formal education, those who had less than a Grade 12 diploma were selected. In 2006, 12.7% of Regina residents 25 to 64 years of age had less than a Grade 12 education.

Figure 5.11 and Table 5.6 show that persons with low levels of formal education tend to have relatively good access to food services compared with other Regina residents in the same age group. For example, 19% of Regina residents 25 to 64 years of age have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store. Among those with less than grade 12, the proportion is 18%.

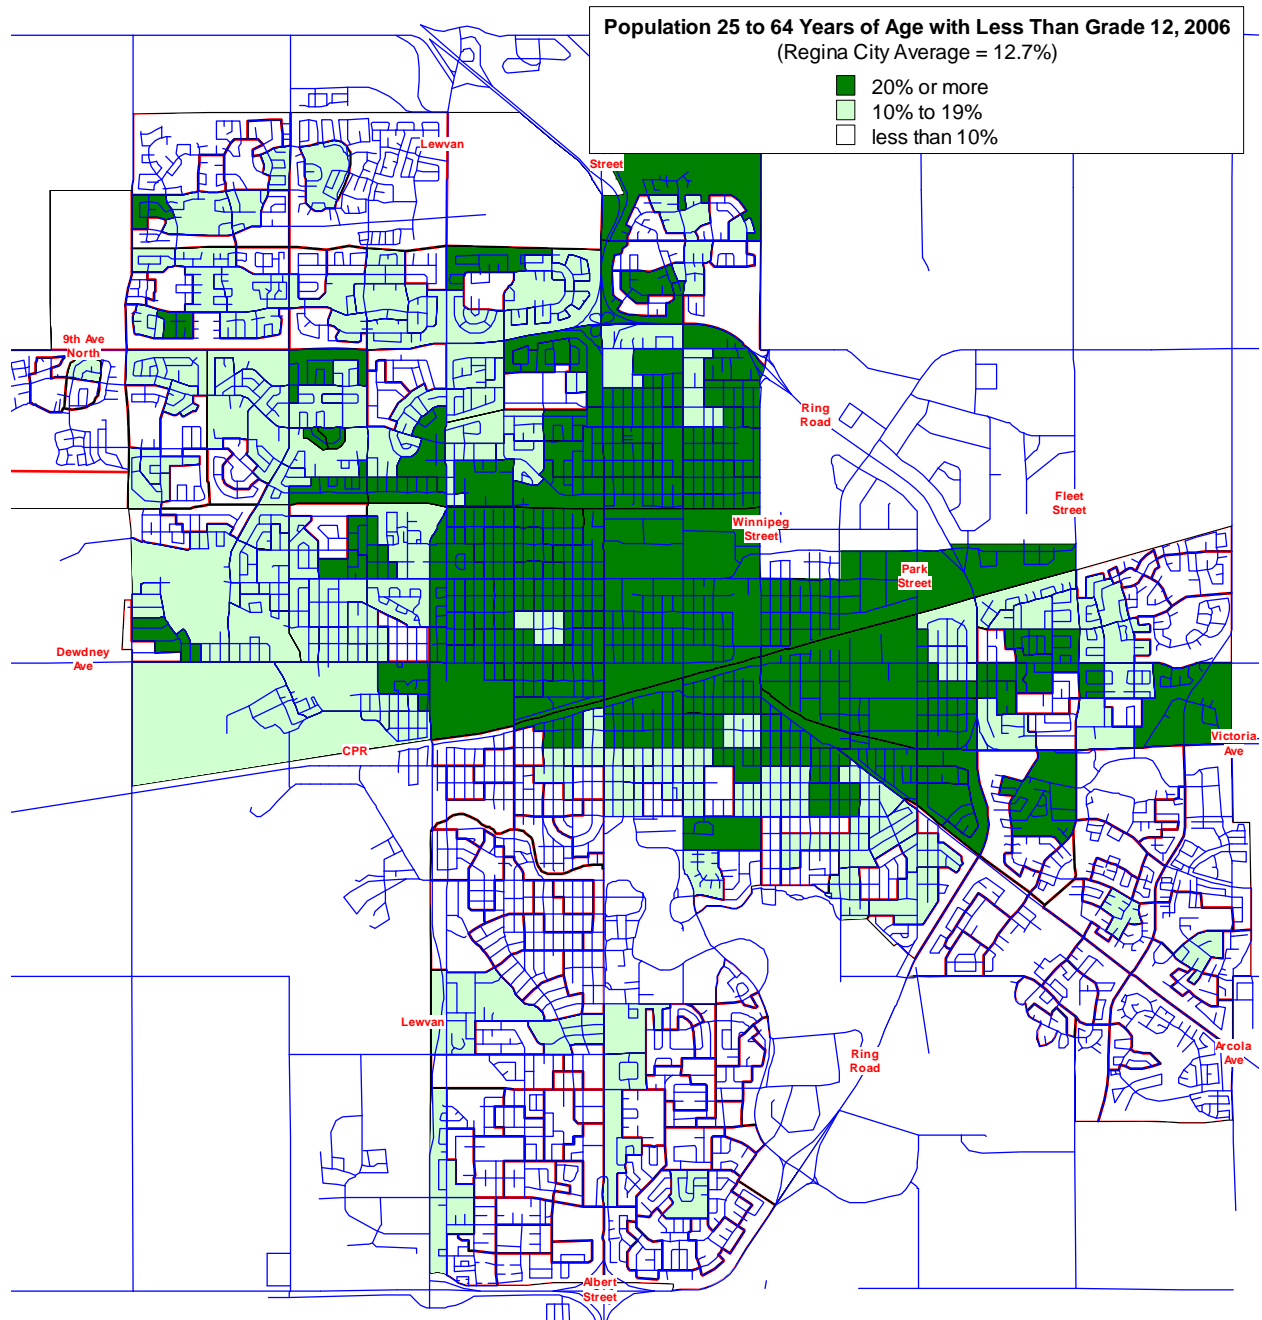

At the other end of the scale, 33% of Regina residents 25 to 64 years of age have only a convenience store or no food facility at all within walking distance compared with 25% of those with less than a Grade 12 education.

Notwithstanding the generally better access, a quarter of those 25 to 64 years of age with less than grade 12 (25%) had, at best, a convenience store within walking distance.

Table 5.6: Access to Food Facilities Among Persons 25 to 64 Years of Age and with Less than a Grade 12 Education

	All Regina Residents 25 to 64 Years of Age, 2006		Ages 25 to 64 Years of Age with Less than a Grade 12 Diploma, 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	25,695	27%	2,300	19%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	31,085	33%	2,985	25%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	56,880	60%	6,260	52%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	17,870	19%	2,180	18%
All Regina city residents	94,720		12,050

5.7 Employed Adults

This section addresses the access to food services for adults who reported that they were employed in May 2006. In the census, “employed” includes all kinds of paid employment – full-time, part-time, paid work, or self-employed. It does not include unpaid housework or unpaid care of children. In 2006, 66% of Regina residents 15 years of age and older were employed.

Figure 5.13 and Table 5.7 show that the employed tend to have poorer access to food services than other Regina residents in the same age group. For example, a higher proportion are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility (27% compared with 25%) and fewer have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store (19% compared with 20%).

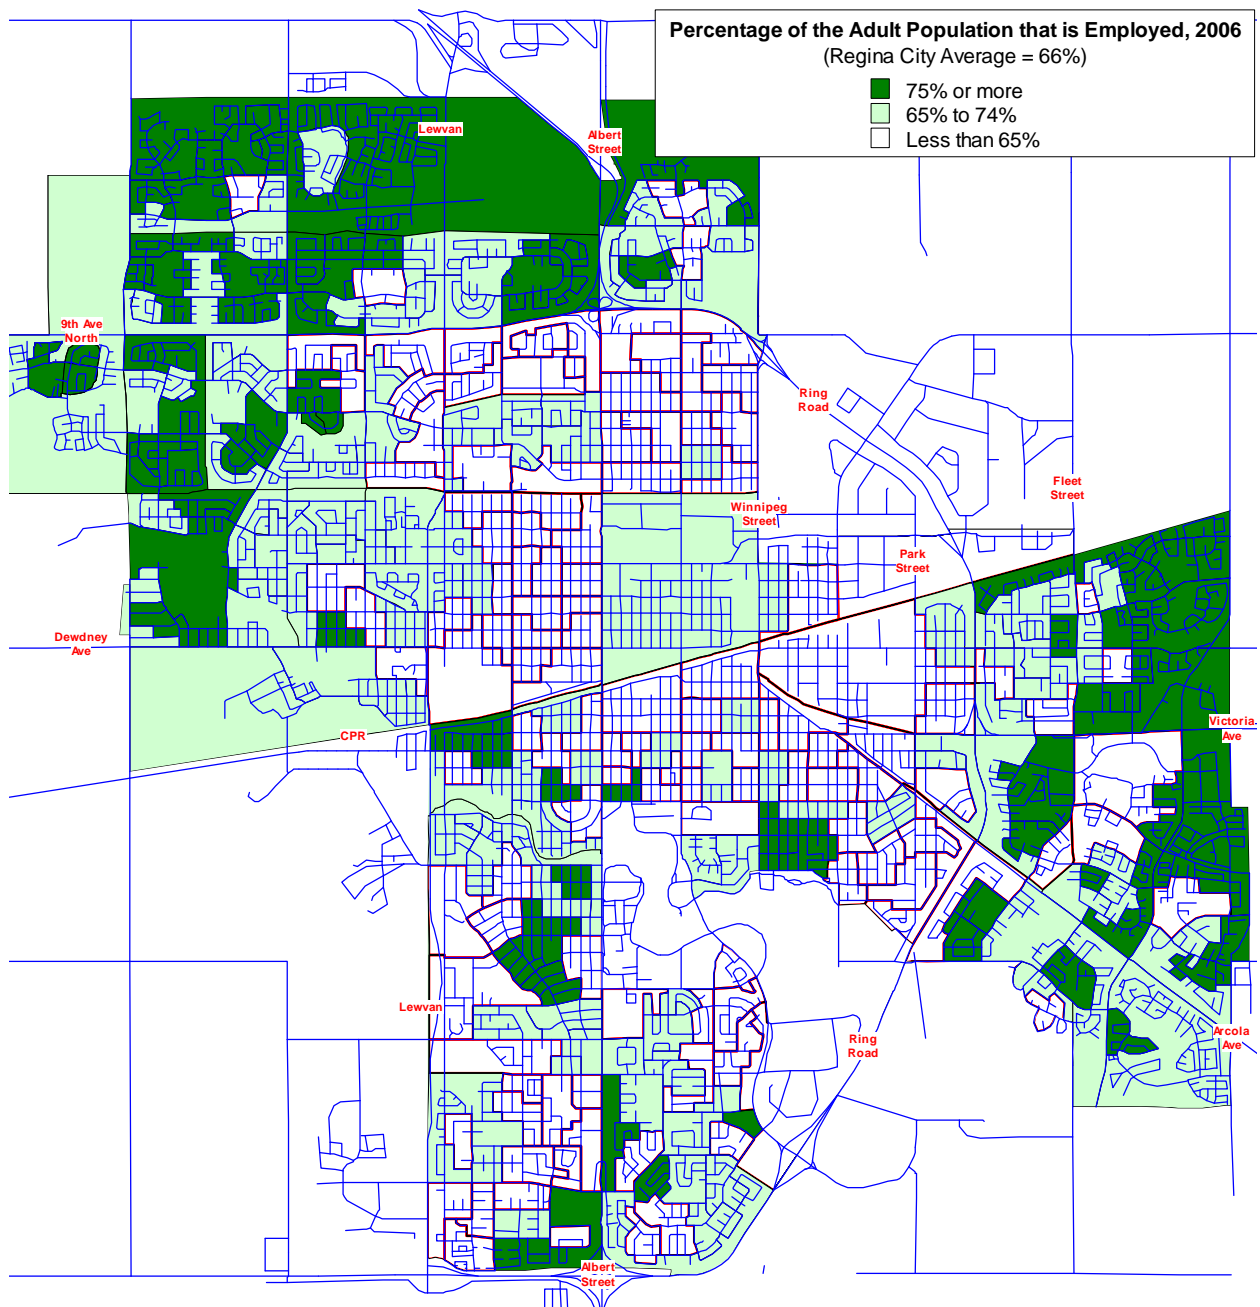

This is in part because, as Figure 5.14 shows, employment is more common in neighbourhoods near the edge of the city than it is in neighbourhoods near the core.

Table 5.7: Access to Food Facilities Among Employed Persons 15 Years of Age and Older

	All Regina Residents 15 & Older, 2006		Employed Persons, 15 & Older, May 2006
	Number	% of Total	Number	% of Total
Are not within walking distance of any kind of food facility	37,090	25%	26,705	27%
Have, at most, only a convenience store within walking distance	45,210	31%	32,325	33%
No grocery store or specialty food store within walking distance	84,415	57%	59,485	61%
Have a good choice of food facilities within walking distance	29,875	20%	18,560	19%
All Regina city residents	147,690		97,485

5.8 Income

This section compares the access to food facilities according to the level of personal income. Individual incomes are largely a function of employment so it is no surprise that these findings mirror those in the previous section.

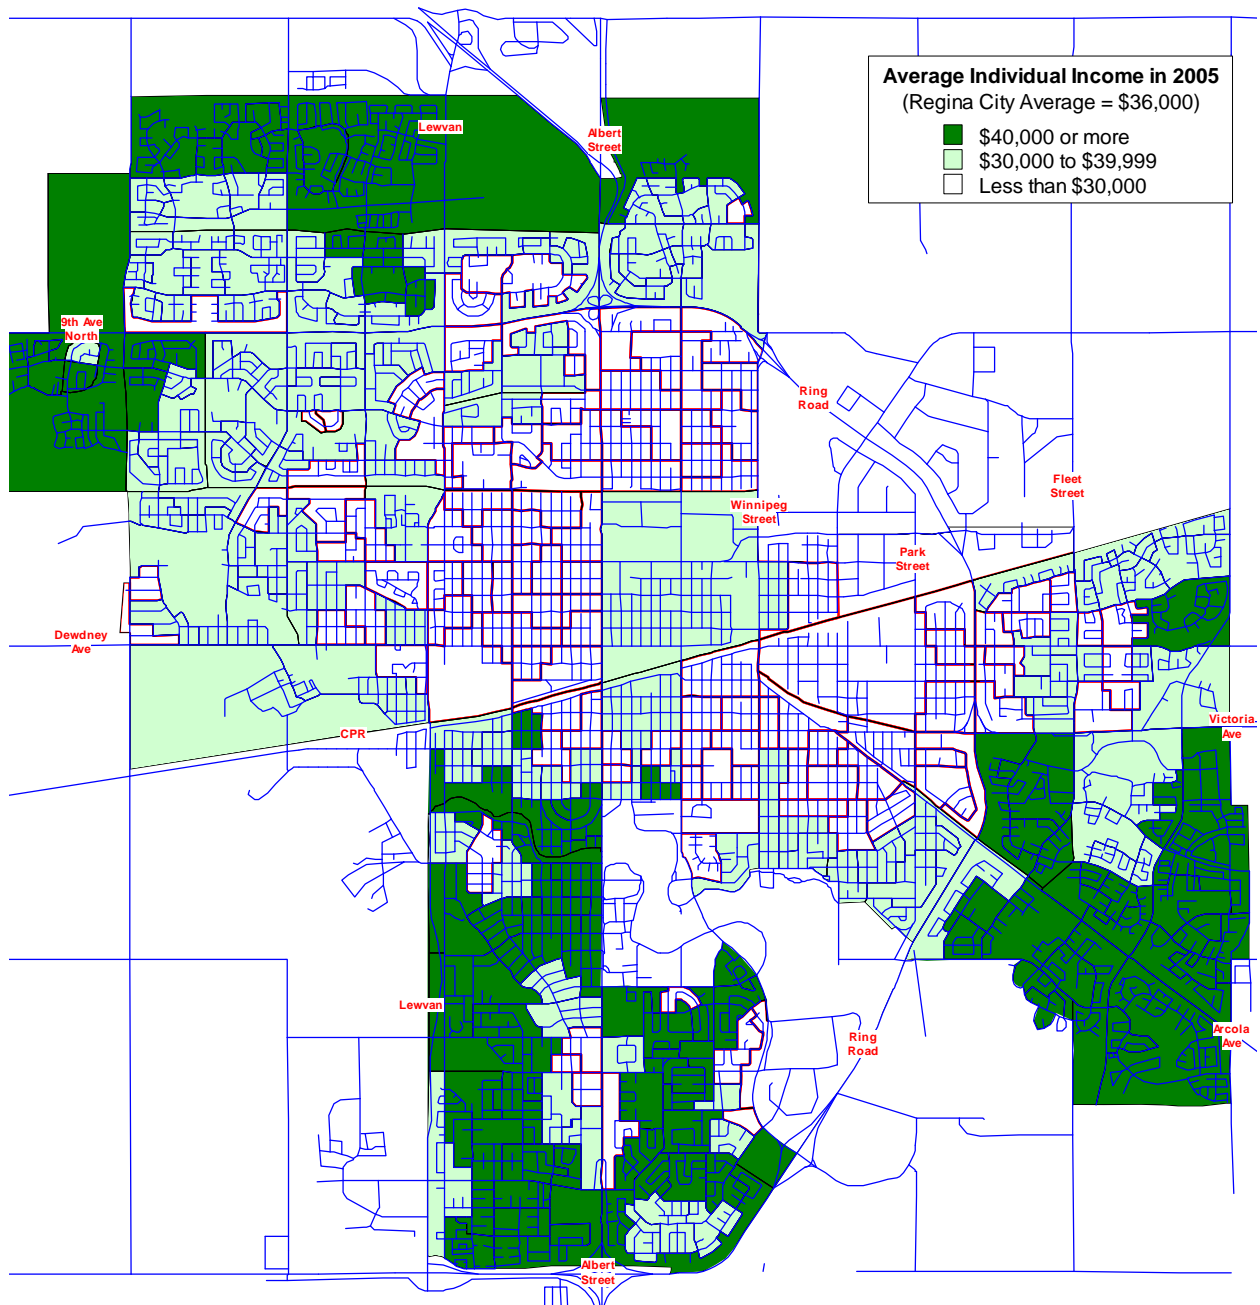

In 2005, the year prior to the 2006 census, the average adult in Regina had a gross income before taxes of $36,000. Figure 5.15 shows that those with good access tend to have lower incomes. For example, among those not within walking distance of any kind of food facility, the average income is $40,900. Among those who have good food choices in the sense that they are within walking distance of a supermarket, a full-service restaurant, and a convenience store, the average income is $34,100.

Figure 5.16 shows that part of the reason is that persons with lower incomes tend to be concentrated in the inner city.
